First Glance Is Impressive

Does Petition Represent Homeowners?

By FRANK LaPIERRE

The 4,000 signatures contained on a petition opposing development of San Bruno Mountain, submitted this week to the City Clerk of Daly City, is impressive — at first glance.

Residents of Daly City, South San Francisco, San Bruno, Pacifica, Brisbane, Colma and Broadmoor signed the petition sponsored by a new group called the "United Residents of Daly City."

BUT THERE WERE other communities equally concerned over the future of the mountain from "outside" the immediate area.

An Analysis

There were people from Lodi, San Francisco and some who signed simply "Fisco."

The "general headquarters" of the new group is 62 Theta Ave., Daly City.

This is the home of Conrad Pavellas, activator of the Original Daly City Protective Association, which boasts a 1,000 plus membership in the eastern sector of the city.

Pavellas' ODCPA group originally was formed to oppose redevelopment in the city.

This week, City Clerk Anna Ohlendorf said she will begin checking the names of those signing the petition against the voter rolls.

A cursory glance at the petition reveals numerous apartment dwellers and non-Daly City residents registering their opposition to the mountain development.

The petition itself has little explanation on it, except to note opposition to the Visitation Associates' planned community and that "under separate writing we will produce good and sufficient reasons for taking this action."

These "good and sufficient reasons," included on a resolution offered to the City Council, purport to spell out the economic, social and ecological impact such a development would have on Daly City.

ON THE OTHER HAND, Pavellas' group notes, the north end of the county direly needs open and park space and the mountain is ideally suited to this.

Visitacion Associates continually have argued that less than 300 acres of the mountain's land mass will be developed, leaving the rest to open and park space.

But Pavellas' group counters most of that offered for open space is "too steep to meet the park needs of the people."

And the development will "hurt the Mission Street Merchants and seriously impede successful commercial redevelopment on San Bruno Mountain," the resolution states.

THE RESOLUTION ALSO notes that the ODCPA, Southern Hills Homeowners Association and the Crocker Hills Neighborhood Association express opposition to the development and support the open space and park concept.

There already have been unofficial charges lodged against the petition's cover letter which, at first glance, indicates support from every major homeowner's group in Daly City.

Under the letterhead "United Residents of Daly City," the associations listed include ODCPA, Hillside Homeowners Association, Crocker Neighborhood Association, Westlake Homeowners Association, All People's Coalition (Visitacion), Serramonte Homeowners Association, Southern Hills Homeowners Association and the Franciscan Trailer Court Residents.

An asterisk after the URDC heading discloses that the organization is "an ad hoc group composed of members of the following organizations for the purpose of saving San Bruno Mountain for a state park."

WHAT THIS AD HOC group wants is for Daly City to take an official stand voicing objections to the development to the Board of Supervisors.

The entire matter of the development now is before the County Supervisors.

Councilman McRobert Stewart has asked the city clerk's office to make an evaluation of the petition.

Other council members are asking for the matter to be considered, perhaps in a public hearing, before offering anything to the supervisors.

Meanwhile, the petition is expected to be presented to the city council at Monday's regular session.

Gun Misfires, DC Police Shoot Suspect

A man armed with a revolver was shot twice by Daly City police officers after he allegedly tried to fire on one of the officers inside a Third Avenue apartment building Monday morning.

Police said the man, Anastacia Refurzo, 27, of 195 Lexington St., San Francisco, aimed his gun at Officer Henry Bunch and pulled the trigger, but the revolver misfired.

Bunch and Officer George Quinn then drew their .38-caliber police specials and began firing at Refurzo, hitting him in the right arm and leg.

Authorities at Chope Community Hospital said the wounded man was in satisfactory condition Monday.

Chief David Hansen is conducting a personal investigation of the incident, the second in the city within the past month.

The earlier shooting involved an ex-Marine who allegedly came at a police officer while armed with a 30-30 rifle and dressed in jungle combat uniform.

In the case, Spence L. Bell, 26, was shot in the chest and is recovering at Mary's Help Hospital.

According to police reports, this morning's incident began shortly after midnight when officers arrested Gregory Smooth, 28, of 107 Third Ave., on drunken driving charges, outside his apartment.

Later, shortly before 3 a.m., Officers Quinn and Bunch were dispatched to the Third Avenue address on a disturbance complaint, believed filed by neighbors.

At that time, according to police, there were two men and a woman inside the apartment.

When things settled down inside the apartment, the police returned to their patrols. However, the two officers again were called out shortly after 3 a.m. on another disturbance call at the apartment.

On that occasion, Officer Bunch said, he saw only one man and a woman inside the apartment and decided to check out a bedroom.

Inside the bedroom, Bunch reportedly encountered Refurzo coming out of a closet with a .38-caliber revolver in his hand.

The officer retreated to a hallway and ordered Refurzo to drop the gun, police said.

Instead, Refurzo allegedly pulled the trigger, but the gun misfired.

At this point, police said, both officers fired at Refurzo a total of seven times.

Refurzo is being charged with assault to commit murder.

Another man, Joseph Moller, 21, of Corte Madera, was also arrested inside the apartment for interferring with a police officer.

SHE'S FOUND SANTA CLAUS
Mrs. Frank Tower turned over a donation to Peter J. Markovich for Operation Santa Claus at her home this week where the two chatted about "Santa Claus" paying her family a visit 23 years ago.

Discovery Of Santa In DC

Perhaps Virginia doubts the existence of Santa Claus, but Mrs. Frank Tower of San Bruno believes in the bewhiskered gentleman in the red suit.

It was 23 years ago when things weren't going very smoothly for the Tower family that a knock came at the door on Christmas Eve.

Mrs. Tower opened the door of her small home at 291 Los Olivos Ave., Daly City, to find a large box of food, complete with a turkey.

There was no one around, and she had no idea who left the goodies.

She thought it was one of her neighbors and went around to thank them for the help.

Frank Tower, a longshoreman, had been on strike since September. There were five children. And the bills were overdue.

Worse, Christmas was here and there was nothing for the children, Mrs. Tower recalled.

The box of food was followed on Christmas Day by several toys for the children.

"I was so happy I couldn't speak," Mrs. Tower told this newspaper. "They even brought milk for my baby."

"After Christmas, I went to thank my neighbors but they knew nothing about it (actually, one of the neighbors had relayed information about the Towers to Operation Santa Claus).

"Last month I was recalling the story to my daughter who is now 25 years old. This morning (Dec. 25) in the North Post I found out who did it.

Consultant Eyed for Vista Grande Cable

The City Council of Daly City is expected to start looking for a consultant to evaluate the community's cable television system at Monday's regular meeting.

During a study session Monday, the council asked City Manager David Rowe to draft an outline for selecting a consultant to check out phases one and two of the Vista Grande cable system — now two-thirds complete.

Councilman McRobert Stewart said he wants to know the status of the system immediately, in order to make a determination on whether to allow Vista Grande to lower its bonding requirements.

The city had insisted on a $250,000 performance bond from Vista Grande and a $200,000 completion bond.

According to a Vista Grande spokesman, the company was able to secure the $200,000 bond. However, Vista Grande has been experiencing difficulty in obtaining the necessary $250,000 performance bond. The company has asked the city to lower the bond to $200,000.

City Atty. Albert Polonsky pointed out to the council that Vista Grande had completed two-thirds of the system and it might be appropriate to lower the bonding requirement accordingly.

However, the council first wants to have the consultant's report before making any decision.

The consultant will be selected by the city, but paid for by Vista Grande. An evaluation will be made of the system by spot checking various areas on the cable.

Councilman William Schumacher thinks Vista Grande might be liable for a material breach of contract with the city and subject to settlement.

Polonsky refused to offer an opinion on Schumacher's statements at the study session, noting only that, "I'm not satisfied there has been a material breach of contract."

Schumacher said he based his charges of a "material breach" on the

Fassler Won't Run

San Mateo County Supervisor Jean Fassler announced Tuesday she will not seek re-election to a fourth term this year.

"Twelve years is sufficient for any public official to remain in one position," Mrs. Fassler told her fellow board members.

The board positions of Mrs. Fassler, who represents the county's Fifth Supervisorial District, and of James V. Fitzgerald and William H. Royer are up for election in the June primary.

Both Fitzgerald and Royer have indicated they plan to seek re-election.

"I'm not going to seek re-election," Mrs. Fassler stated. "I'll pass on my responsibility to someone else. It has not been an easy decision, but I think it is right. After very careful thought, there are other things I want to do."

Mrs. Fassler, 56, the wife of Joe Fassler, a retired Standard Oil Company executive, is only the second woman ever to serve on the Board of Supervisors. She has served as chairwoman three times

Artistic Approach to Informing Patients

By JANET PARKER

When Larry Krames chose a medical career over artistic talents, he didn't entirely abandon art.

Instead, he did medical art in medical school as an internist and today he's president of Physicians Art Service, a Daly City company backed entirely by 23 local doctors.

"There was a time when very little information was disseminated to the patient," Dr. Krames said. "The doctor was a magical thing. What he said went."

Now, he said, patients are demanding more information about the operations and other medical work performed on their bodies.

"The doctor today is more receptive to dissemination of materials," he said.

And besides, it's all a positive approach to minimizing the risk of malpractice lawsuits by better informing the patients, he noted.

Physicians Art Service started in 1973 with a set of silk screen cartoon-like wall hangings in the Mary's Help Hospital pediatrics ward.

A purple elephant sporting a cast, a lion with a crutch and a tiger in traction quickly caught the attention of the young hospitalized patients.

Al Wiseman, "Dennis the Menace" illustrator, created those drawings.

Mills Hospital, as well as hundreds of others across the nation, now also have the wall hangings.

But that's only part of the service.

"We realized and became aware of the need for material not only for pediatrics, but for the general public as well," Krames said.

So, the company has begun to market a variety of colorful cartoon art books which explain bewildering medical problems in plain terms for patients of all ages.

In addition, a cheerful coloring book now accompanies the pediatric wall hangings.

Hospitals order anywhere from six to 25 of the hangings.

The informational booklets, however, are of primary concern now.

They are in the process of marketing or completing several booklets, including "Your T and A Journey," a book on tonsillectomy; "The Love Bugs," a book on venereal disease; "Hey Mom;" a booklet on the process of birth and delivery; "An Apple A Year," which focuses on the importance of the annual physical exam; and "Contact Lenses."

Future plans include a book on anesthesiology and a booklet on acne.

Another book, "Cast Care," already has been widely circulated.

Krames explained that Physicians Art Services distributes its material directly to doctors or hospitals.

EYE-CATCHING, INFORMATIVE
Dr. Lawrence Krames with booklets

"The practicing physician is in the best possible position to perceive and direct patient information material," he said.

That's why the board of consultants is composed of physicians.

The company's literature and artwork is thoroughly examined by doctors with expertise in those areas before going to press.

Krames said a great part of the malpractice problems today is lack of communication between doctor and physician.

It's a combination of the physician's lack of time to spend with each individual patient and the patient's misunderstanding of what the doctor has said, he pointed out.

"The economics of medicine today don't allow a doctor to spend five hours with a patient," he said. The patient can take the Physicians Art Service material home and read it in the security of his own home.

"Information is necessary," Krames added. "Patients need it and courts require it."

Art, of course, is the universal medium, he said, and that's why it is the best medium to relate complicated medical problems.

"The pitfall of patient information in the past is that it basically addressed itself to the very sophisticated patient," Krames said, "and there weren't that many sophisticated patients around.

"We need to be sensitive to people and people's needs," he said. He became aware that physicians were very excited about another physican illustrating their materials. He was in demand and other doctors trusted him.

He shows a sketch of his own which will be incorporated into "Hey Mom"!" — a diagram of the hospital delivery rooms contained in the word "LOVE." Many of his own artistic ideas are incorporated into the booklets.

Young and old physicians are realizing the need, Krames said, and are admitting they have been frustrated by the limited information available for their patients.

In fact, he said most information available intimidates patients.

"With the use of art and simplified copy, we can disseminate this information in a pleasing, non-threatening way," Krames said.

The intent is to supplement the physician, not replace him.

"Patients are demanding to know what's happening," Krames said. And until now, the medical field has done little to supply that desired information in an easily understood format, he added.

'Sphere' Hearing Tonight in DC

The San Mateo County Local Agency Formation Commission will hold its second public hearing on the Daly City region Sphere of Influence recommendations at 7:30 p.m. today in the Daly City Civic Center.

The hearing will be on a LAFCO staff study, which recommends combining eventually eight existing, separate entities — the city of Daly City, the Town of Colma and the North County Sanitation District, the Colma Fire Protection and Broadmoor Police Protection Districts, the Colma Highway Lighting and the Bayshore Sanitary Districts, and the Dimond Public Utility District.

Murder Establishes Grim Record

By FRANK La PIERRE

While politics is expected to dominate the scene in San Mateo County's second largest city during the first part of 1976, crime succeeded in topping the list of attention-getters during 1975 in Daly City.

The year 1976 begins with speculation as to which candidate, of the half dozen or so mentioned, will occupy the two spots up for grabs after March 2.

And while City Hall watchers savor each tiny morsel of political gossip being whispered about the city concerning "deals" of all sorts, amateur crimebusters still are attempting to solve the city's latest, and only, unsolved double murder in recent history.

To date, police have expended more than 800 man-hours on the investigation of a man and his wife found tied, gagged and shot to death in their home some two months ago.

Police thus far admittedly are baffled by the crime.

The double homocide was only one of eight murders that struck the city in 1975.

While armed robberies, purse snatchers, auto thefts and bicycle thefts have declined in the past 12 months, there has been a slight increase in burglaries, strongarm robberies and petty thefts.

Police Chief David Hansen called the number of murders "unprecedented" in the department's long history.

In addition to writing 1,800 traffic citations in 1975, and investigating an average of 30 to 40 traffic accidents monthly, the police department drove some 60,000 miles per month to carry out those duties.

Chief Hansen projects an increase of 50 per cent in the processing of warrants in the city, primarily due to a higher ratio of "foreign jurisdictions entering more of their warrants in the computerized aid system."

The "paper explosion" that threatens to inundate the city clerk's office qualified it for federal revenue sharing funds needed to buy a new "open shelf filing system," City Clerk Anna Ohlendorf explained.

Many vital records will be stored on micro film in the new system, promoting efficiency and ecoinomy in that office during the coming year.

During the past year, a major new office was created in city government — that of director of community development.

This new office, headed by Don Fleming, a six-year veteran of the city manager's office, incorporates the offices of planning, housing and development under one roof.

During the early months of 1976, a 50-member citizens' advisory committee is expected to hand in its findings on modification of the city's general plan, last updated in 1968 at a cost of $110,000 (partially with government funds.)

The Project Area Committee (PAC) selected a consulting firm to draft a final plan for what is hoped will be a revitalization of the Mission Street-Junipero Serra Boulevard business corridors.

Both PAC and Community Development department staff are working closely with the consulting firm to bring forward what Fleming calls "a positive program for the development of the commercial corridors."

Included in the recreation projects completed in 1975 were the Lincoln Park Expansion Program (Phase One), which involved removal of five dwellings, landscaping and addition to the Lincoln Park Clubhouse at a total cost of $316,329.52.

On June 14, 1975, the Camelot Park tot-lot was completed at a cost of $25,367 after months of construction.

Projects expected to be completed in 1976 include 10 new tennis courts atop reservoir 5B in the Serramonte area and landscaping around the huge water storage facility.

An on-going program, started years ago in Daly City, is the annual planting of thousands of trees along city streets. The trees are supplied by the city's nursery in the Civic Center area, under the supervision of August Conci.

One of the largest projects that will be undertaken in the coming year is construction of Gellert Park Clubhouse. Cost of the facility is estimated at $130,000.

Another $34,000 will be expended in 1976 for bike paths in the city.

Two bike paths — from the San Francisco County line along Lake Merced Boulevard to John Daly Boulevard and from Junipero Serra Boulevard to Skyline Boulevard — were approved by the County Bikeways Committee.

Application for grants under the 1974 State Recreation Bond Act were submitted, totaling some $252,000, for four new parks: Hillside, Lincoln, Bayshore and Mussel Rock parks.

Some 52,200 persons used the new Westmoor swimming pool last year, while total attendance at the city's playgrounds topped 555,000, according to records.

The Daly City Community Service Center participated in the following activities last year: child care program; Operation Headstart; CETA programs; Guadalupe Health Center; United Way; County Housing Authority projects; County Manpower Planning Council; summer programs (Neighborhood Youth Council). Also county revenue hearings; Junta de Mujeres de la Raza; County Commission on Status of Women; County Mental Health Advisory Board; children's services; Thanksgiving basket disposal; Senior Citizen Nutrition project; Arts Council proposal; Mexican-American Unity Council (MAUC).

Operation Santa Claus; Association of Bay Area Governments (ABAG); Juvenile Diversionary program; food stamp outreach program; art classes; teen and adult recreation programs; emergency food bank, and food stamp distribution center (15,000 homes in last 11 months).

Building continued to show slight gains in 1975. A total of 815 building permits were issued, with a valuation of some $14.6 million.

In addition to construction of the new Serramonte Library ($488,077), projects now under design by the city staff include a storm drain system to alleviate flooding in the Sullivan and 91st Street area (108,000); an elevator at City Hall ($75,000), and, a ramp for handicapped persons at City Hall ($10,000).

There were four sizeable subdivisions under way in Daly City at year's end:

Serramonte Unit No. 19, at Callan Boulevard and Morton Drive; Blossom Valley, along East Market, at Price and Florence Streets; Midway Village near the Cow Palace (formerly a U.S. military billeting project); and, Nano Park, Second Avenue between Price and Castle Streets.

Second Assault Charge Reported

Within hours after his arraignment in the North San Mateo County Judicial District Court, Joseph Manfree, 20, of San Bruno, picked up a board and attacked two Sheriff's deputies, officers said Dec. 30.

Manfree, according to San Bruno police, was arrested and charged with assault with a deadly weapon after he flung a broken plastic sign at two officers at about 10 p.m. Sunday.

Sgt. Tom Manning and officer James Potter were on patrol near the corner of El Camino Real and Crystal Springs Road when they spotted a man standing in the middle of the road.

The officers said they were merely going to ask the man, later identified as Manfree, of 182 Acacia Street, San Bruno, to get out of the road, "when he picked up a broken piece of plastic sign and flung it at us Frisbee style."

The missile hit the police car, and the officers went after Manfree.

A brief scuffle ensued. Manfree was arrested and booked into the North County Pre-Arraignment Detention Facility in Daly City.

A spokesman at the facility said, "We didn't have any trouble with (Manfree) while he was here."

After his arraignment Monday in the South San Francisco Court, Manfree was turned over to sheriff's deputies.

While being held in a cell at the court, Manfree allegedly pulled loose a six-foot length of wooden baseboard and swung it at Sheriff's Deputy William McCann.

McCann was treated for abrasions, and a second charge of assault with a deadly weapon was filed against Manfree.

DC Fire Lights Sky

A roaring house fire at 205 Los Olivos Ave., Daly City, caused an estimated $30,000 in damages Saturday shortly before 7 p.m.

No one was hurt in the fire which sent flames and smoke spiraling high into the night sky near the Bay Area Rapid Transit station.

The fire is believed to have started in the living room of the home from faulty wiring, according to battalion chief Mel Hansen.

"It was a real bonfire on our arrival," Hansen said.

The home is occupied by the Thomas Vivano family, Hansen said.

Thoughts on the State's New Sexual Freedom Law

By JOHN HORGAN
Post Staff Writer

Oh, where to begin? I think I'm getting another headache just thinking about it.

I guess you can blame Governor Brown for most of it. It is really his fault.

My dilemma is a serious one. I have the feeling that I am not alone too. There are a lot of us who suffer from the same sort of malaise.

I have lost no little amount of sleep over it. Tonight will be no different, I can assure you. In fact, tonight might be the worst of all.

Tomorrow is the first day that California's new sexual freedom law will be in effect.

I am sitting here hyperventilating just thinking about the consequences of that ill-advised piece of work.

For prudes like me, the new year is going to be anything but an exercise in liberation.

When the governor signed that measure, he may have signed my psychic death knell.

In an age when loose sex has become commonplace, I have spent a lifetime worrying about topless natives in the National Geographic.

Now that everything you can imagine is legal between two consenting adults in this enlightened state, I have no nowhere to go.

I come from the old school where the mere thought of consenting to something questionable was grounds for banishment to Hades West.

You didn't toy with that sort of dogma. Such a threat to your beloved person was worse than problem perspiration or a terminal case of the wethead.

For me, just about anything physical in the back seat of an old Packard was big trouble.

I was so concerned about what might happen in a car that I didn't go out on a date in one until I was 27 — and even then I made my wife drive. I sat in the back seat alone.

The local drive-in was, of course, verboten. Its siren song lured all of us enticingly. Some resisted. I was among them.

To point out that the drive-in was a forbidden zone was like noting that Pinky Lee lisped.

Was the drive-in a source of sin? Ha, sir. Does OPEC have crude? Does Mayor Beame have money problems? Does Howard Cosell offend?

I didn't go to a drive-in until I was 30. I went only because they were showing Son of Fantasia and selected shorts.

I didn't stay for the shorts. They sounded risque.

My worst moment in college occurred when I got caught dancing too close in public by a teacher. I immediately promised to mend my ways. I became a wallflower. I blended in with the foliage so well at the Fairmont that the florist carted me off when the dance was over.

For a time, I was certain that marriage would be the answer to all this. It wasn't. It made things worse.

I had finally convinced my wife that it was normal for me to live in a tree house in our backyard when the governor went and signed that bill.

Now, everything you wanted to do but were afraid to try is going to be legit. At the stroke of midnight, we are going to be overwhelmed by a tidal wave of sin. The governor has no idea what he has done.

But, I'm wasting no time. I'm heading for the Fairmont. I'll be the vine in the leisure suit on your left.

All-America Glads

By IVA NEWMAN

It is a pleasure this year to announce the 1976 All-America Gladiolus, especially since two of them are named to commemorate America's bicentennial, the glorious event being celebrated throughout the year.

Four gladiolus have received the 1976 All-America award. With the nation celebrating its 200th birthday in 1976, it is fitting that the two large flowered introductions be named America and Spectacular. Lambkin and Rudolph, the other winners, are All-America miniatures.

America has chalky-white florets with intense blood-red markings. It is an early bloomer with five-foot spikes that will open eight to 10 florets at once on robust plants. Praised as the most brilliant combination of colors imaginable, the new America, truly an All-America, is eye-catching and it will add sparkle and zest to the garden. It will also help win ribbons in flower arrangement competitions honoring the bicentennial.

Spectacular is perfectly descriptive of this selection. The flowers are large, pure golden-yellow surrounded by a vividly complimentary rose-red corona at petal edges. It is a strong grower with up to 24 buds, on five-foot stems and up to 10 formally-placed, round, ruffled and recurved florets open at once on perfectly tapered flowerheads. Its ease of culture won it points in the All-America competition.

Lambkin, the little All-America miniature has intensely ruffled and fluted three-inch florets of which eight open on slender 40-inch stems. Lambkin's ivory-white shading will combine in floral arrangements with any other color, and the ideally tapered spikes will be at home on the show table as well.

Rudolph is a dazzling, rich red, with seven to eight recurved cup-like florets, graced with white stamens, perfectly placed on pencil-straight stems with 16 to 17 buds. Rudolph is said to combine beautifully with yellows, oranges, salmons, pinks, rosy-reds, and purples in floral compositions.

Rudolph and Lambkin combined with Bluebird (an earlier All-American miniature release) and perfect for red, white and blue indoor decorations during the 1976 bicentennial year.

Carl Fischer of Noweta Gardens, St. Charles, Minn., an internationally known hybridizer, created America, Spectacular and Lambkin. Fischer has given gardeners many of the world's great gladiolus, including numerous other All-America winners. Dr. R. A. Griesbach, professor of genetics in the Department of Biological Sciences at De Paul University, Chicago, is the originator of Rudolph.

Available Locally

The corms of these 1976 All-America winners can be purchased from any one of a number of catalogs but Peninsula gardeners can get them equally soon by placing an order with a local nursery. The shipments usually arrive about the middle of January and they can be planted as soon as they arrive.

The gladiolus, America's favorite cut flower, is very versatile providing color and enjoyment both indoors and out. As a cut flower, they provide color in an arrangement for many days. For best results the gladiolus should be cut when one to three florets are open. Cut them early in the morning when the stalks are full of moisture and place them in deep, cool water. If possible, leave them for several hours before making the arrangement. When cutting be sure to leave four to five leaves on the plant to supply the corm with nutrients for the next season's growth. We like to do traditional Japanese arrangements and these call for a great many leaves. To perserve the newer, more expensive corms, we plant a number of inexpensive kinds for leaves to cut. To keep arrangements looking fresh as long as possible, remove the flowers as they fade and shorten the stem to hide the scar.

Gladiolus are very easy to grow and can be used in a number of ways. They will be most striking when given a place in the sun

Sorenson Likes Younger Plan

San Mateo County Dist. Atty. Keith C. Sorenson today endorsed Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger's announced intention to seek legislation to abandon sentence bargaining.

Sentence bargaining is a practice whereby the defense and prosecution, and usually the judge, agree on a sentence to induce a defendant to plead guilty.

Sorenson noted that his policy allows sentence bargaining on a limited basis, and only in the case of less severe felonies "where we are confident that a judge would not sentence the defendant to prison in any event."

Also, Sorenson said that his office only recommends a sentence, recognizing that the final determination rests with a judge.

An example of sentence bargaining is a recent case in which a man charged with conspiracy and with selling dangerous drugs entered a conditional plea of guilty with the understanding he would not receive a prison sentence.

A probation officer returned a recommendation of prison to the judge, thus the defendant was allowed to withdraw his guilty pleas and go to trial on the charges.

2 Daly City Trials Slated

Joe Glenn Garcia, 19, will be tried Jan. 13 in the knife slaying of 17-year-old Yolanda Figuera of Daly City.

While the young victim's mother sat weeping in the rear of a South San Francisco courtroom Monday, Circuit Judge Wayne Wiley ordered Garcia to appear in Redwood City Superior Court to answer the murder charges.

Judge Wiley set bail at $150,000 in the case during the preliminary hearing.

The judge heard Dr. Peter A. Bensen of the San Mateo County Coroner's Office detail autopsy findings performed Dec. 13 at Chope Community Hospital.

Dr. Benson said he discovered 24 stab wounds (ranging in depth from one-half inch to four-and-a-half inches), six cutting wounds and an abrasion on the victim's right cheek.

"Any one of the 10 stab wounds could have caused death," Dr. Benson said.

Case of death of Yolanda Figuera was ruled to be loss of blood, Dr. Benson told the court.

The victim was found lying in a pool of blood in the living room of her home at 347 San Diego Ave., Daly City, shortly before 11:30 a.m. on Dec. 12, Det. Dennis Prator said.

A knife was in the victim's hand. What appeared to be footprints tracked through blood across the carpet also were found at the scene, according to testimony.

Outside the home Prator said, he saw Garcia talking to two uniformed police officers.

There were traces of blood on both Garcia's right hand and on his shoes, Prator testified.

Defense attorney in the case is David Goldstein of South San Francisco. Deputy Dist. Atty. Erick Ebbel was the prosecutor at the preliminary hearing.

Meanwhile, Charles C. Lawrence, accused slayer of a 7-month-old child and the brutal beating of his 19-year-old girl friend in a Daly City apartment in early December, was held to answer to the charges during a closed preliminary hearing in South San Francisco Monday morning.

Judge Wiley bound Lawrence over to Superior Court in Redwood City to stand trial Jan. 14 on murder and assault with a deadly weapon charges.

Deputy Dist. Atty. John Oakes said the defense attorney for Lawrence had asked that the court be closed to the public and the judge had agreed to the request.

Silver Offers Conditions for Mountain

Richard L. Silver, candidate for City Council of Daly City, said this week he supports development of the Crocker Hills area of San Bruno Mountain "providing certain modifications to existing plans are made by Visitacion Associates."

The modifications include lowering the proposed height of buildings from 22-plus stories down to 12 to 15 stories, Silver said.

"The towers, as now proposed by Visitacion Associates, in the planned community are a little impractical," Silver said. "By increasing the size of the lower structures, the builder would get the same amount of space."

Silver said cost of purchasing the mountain, if the development presently before the San Mateo County Board of Supervisors is rejected, probably would come from local taxpayers.

Estimated cost of the property involved in the Visitacion plan, according to the developer, could run as high as $35 million.

That would mean property taxpayers in San Mateo County could get hit with a 40 cent per $100 of assessed valuation indebtedness for perhaps the next 20 to 25 years, Silver said.

"When most of our citizens are already scrapping bottom to pay the everyday costs of maintaining a home and present taxes, it would be criminal to ask for more taxes, especially from those now trying to survive on fixed incomes," Silver said.

San Mateo County needs an estimated 7,500 new homes every year to meet letter to The Post.

Last year, 1,800 new units were built, Silver said.

"One reason the cost of housing in our county is rising is the acute shortage of available homes, coupled Matter-of-fact, he was residents and smaller average families, Silver said.

Massive unemployment, especially in the building and construction trades, is yet another justification for the development, Silver said.

"The Plumbers Union has about 30 per cent of its work force unemployed, and the Carpenters Union has approximately 20 to 25 per cent unemployed," according to Silver.

"We simply must begin responding to these needs. We cannot continue to ignore these basic facts — that there is a housing shortage, and there is massive unemployment here," Silver said.

Order Is Selected

The Secretary of State Monday drew the order of listing for candidates in the upcoming March 2 municipal elections throughout the state.

It was the first time in the state's history that candidates would be entered on the ballot by blind drawings, rather than alphabetically.

In Daly City, former councilman Michael DeBernardi will top the ballot, followed by George Ron Darling, Peter Forrester, Rich Walsh, Richard Silver, incumbent Councilman and former Mayor Anthony Giammona, James Tucker and Albert Teglia.

failure of Vista Grande to provide a $250,000 bond.

Restating his earlier views that Vista Grande should post a bond with the city to guarantee performance of the system, Councilman Anthony Giammona said "perhaps the full amount (of $250,000) would not be necessary inasmuch as the system is now more than two-thirds complete."

Giammona instructed Polonsky to get together with the cable company "and work something out on the bond."

The councilman also wants a public hearing held on the matter to get input on how cable system maintenance is being handled, reception of networks and general attitude of the company toward patrons.

In other matters Monday, the council discussed parking bail increases for the city, but indicated they would reject attempts to up the parking bail from $2 to $5.

Councilman Paul Hupf, a former municipal judge, said he opposed any increases in the parking bail. Such an increase would drive motorists out of the Mission Street business area to business areas offering free parking, Hupf ventured.

Most parking citations come from overtime parking at parking meters installed on Mission Street.

Giammona said he wants to know how the Mission Merchants Association and other business groups feel about such a move before taking any action.

Last September, the Municipal Court judges of San Mateo County revised bail schedules for parking violations in an effort to make them uniform throughout the county.

However, the order was suspended after it became clear there were widely differing views on the subject from city to city. Judge Wilbur R. Johnson, chairman of the county's Municipal Court judges, noted in a letter to city officials.

Santa

"God Bless them and all the nice people who made it possible. My children will now find out who did it," Mrs. Tower wrote in a letter to The Post.

This week she met "Santa" for the first time face-to-face.

He wasn't robust, bewhiskered or dressed in a red uit.

Matter-of-fact, he dressed in a conservtive brown suit and smokes cigars. But he smiles and laughs as much as Old Saint Nick.

Daly City's "Santa" is Pete Markovich, general manager of the Chamber of Commerce.

Markovich said he did not recall making the delivery, "although I probably did."

"Twenty-three years ago is a long time. We never keep records of who we make deliveries to. All that the drivers, who bring these folks the boxes know, is the address — nothing else," Markovich said.

Mrs. Tower's husband is still a longshoreman. She now lives on Fernwood Drive in San Bruno. Her children are all grown and gone their separate ways.

Alone in her home, she now has time to reflect on those long ago days.

"When we need a helping hand Operation Santa Claus was there. I can never forget that. From the bottom of my heart I want to thank you," she told Markovich.

since joining the board Jan. 1, 1965.

At least one candidate has announced already that he will seek the Fifth Supervisorial District post. Daly City Councilman McRobert Stewart has made it known that he will enter the election race for the position.

Mrs. Fassler originally was appointed to the board by Gov. Edmund Brown after Joe Verducci, who defeated her in the 1964 supervisorial election, died before he could take office.

Future Leads Upward

By GEORGE GOLDING

In a sense, the story of Hughes Airwest during 1974 has been the story of the commercial air transport industry — sometimes up and sometimes down but with a firm belief in the future.

At year's end, Airwest employes heard operations vice president Edwin Altman describe the new Boeing 727s they will get in 1976, planes larger and faster and with more range than anything the airline now operates.

With a price tag of $36 million, such an undertaking is a real vote of confidence in the future and in the company's ability to succeed.

At the same time, it is a statement of confidence that the industry will not be demolished by its enemies, that it will again become everybody's darling.

Like others in the industry, the San Mateo-based firm has its problems.

There are airports where planes are no longer welcome because they make noise.

There are citizen groups demanding night curfews.

Conservationists say jet planes use too much fuel, and planners say airports use too much ground space.

In little more than a single year, public demands on the industry have switched from "more seats for more people to more places," to suggestions that perhaps there already are too many.

America's growth syndrome seems to be ending, and the aviation industry, in order to stay in business, will have to transform itself in keeping with the new pattern.

At the same time, the industry must face its normal problems, which tend to be massive.

As an example, the recent United Airlines strike, involving but one airline company out of the 25 which serve San Francisco International Airport, had effects upon the nation's travel plans at Christmas.

Equally spectacular are the occasional air crashes resulting from combinations of human failure, bad weather conditions, and equipment failure. Airline crashes tend to be national disasters.

The signs for the future are the same for small plane aviation

Although sales are at an all time high, restrictions grow tighter and tighter. More residents ask for limits on airport growth, for reductions in aircraft noise, for a halt to "recreational flying."

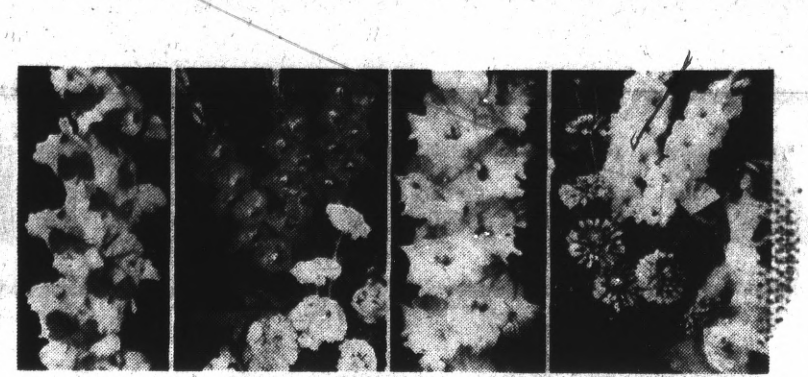
with a bit of wind protection. For display in borders, bold clumps are best, or if you plant in full beds, you can scatter the corms for a natural effect. If you are growing just for cut flowers, the most efficient way is to plant in rows or clumps of five to seven corms. They like a rich, sandy loam worked about 12 inches deep.

Fertilize

We work our planting area a full spade depth then make a basin three inches deeper than we plan to set the corms. Magamp, a 7-40-6 non-burning fertilizer, is spread on the bottom of the basin at the rate of one tablespoon per corm. Three inches of prepared soil is spread over the fertilizer and the corms placed pointed side up on the unfertilized soil.



WINNERS

The Pace Slows Up as the New Year Begins

Louanne Heath

It appears to be a rather slow paced week as the area recovers from its New Year celebrations and contemplates a year-long schedule of bicentennial observations.

This January, we will see celebrations of Martin Luther King, Jr's birthday and the birthdays of Benjamin Franklin and Robert E. Lee, all to be viewed with special attention to the roles they have played in the development of the United States. New insights into the lives of men that have added broad strands of spiritual and political philosophy to the tapestry of American history.

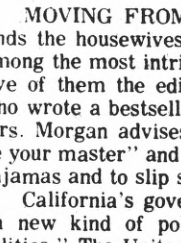
ALMOST EVERYONE buys more groceries during the last few days of the year and some of those packages that you are emptying now contain special coupons that have special value to local groups.

Mrs. Toni Michels of the Mary's Help Hospital Guild is seeking all of the "300 Bonus Gift Coupons" that she can obtain.

The special gift coupons, as well as any other coupon from packages or glossy magazines, are turned in to be redeemed for the benefit of the Scholarship Fund. Collectors may turn them into the volunteers in the gift shop in the hospital or drop them into an envelope and mail them to Mrs. Michels, 15 Morton Drive, Daly City, 94015.

THE TABS on any brand of tea bags or Betty Crocker coupons are being sought by Mrs. Beth Cubbons, who is working with an interdenominational project sponsored by the Lutheran Ladies of Our Savior Lutheran Church. The tabs, or coupons, may be sent to Mrs. Cubbons at Lakeside Presbyterian Church, 201 Eucalyptus Drive, San Francisco, or given to members of the Ladies Lutheran League.

Independent of the coupon and tabs drive, but still in the province of Mrs. Cubbons, is the collection of cancelled postage stamps of any type. Mrs. Cubbons forwards the stamps to the Church World Service outlet, CROP, which sells the stamps to collectors around the world and uses the money to purchase food for needy people. The stamps may also be sent to the Eucalptus drive address.



Samuel Chandler

"The voice of the people is in some ways divine." — Hesoid.

From "the rockbound coast of Maine to the sunny shores of California" comes a roar, that People Weekly calls a landslide, calling out the names of the intriguing men and women of the land. From the names so called the editors have selected the twenty-five most intriguing people of America at the dawning of 1976.

Heading the list is Betty Ford, whom the editors of People call "the president's secret weapon" and name as one of the most popular First Ladies in history. Strangely, enough, her husband is not named among the 25.

Cher — who else? — heads the list of intriguing show people and also as "the ricochet bride . . . the First Lady of splitsville."

Dolly Parton, country music singer is named as "Nashville's new queen-in-waiting." To introduce her the editors of People quote Maria Mulder. "Dolly's voice has an essence and purity that chills me to the bone. She goes beyond that canned syrup out of Nashville. I'd love to sing like her, but I can't."

Woody Allen is introduced as a winning klutz who has moved from "snappy one-liners to a triple creative threat." Born Allen Stewart Konigsberg, Allen once wrote for Sid Caesar, then overcoming his deep "Wallflower complex," he put together a personality and an act that makes him laugh and quip "even my neurosis is creative."

MOVING FROM showpeople People Weekly finds the housewives of the antifeminist backlash among the most intriguing people. As respresentative of them the editors choose Marabel Morgan who wrote a bestseller entitled The Total Woman. Mrs. Morgan advises wives to "let your husband be your master" and to greet him in pink baby-doll pajamas and to slip sexy notes into his briefcase."

California's governor, Jerry Brown, is called "a new kind of politician with a new kind of politics." The United States representative to the U.N., Pat Moynihan, India's Indira Ghandi, China's Teng Hsiao-ping and Egypt's President Anwar Sadat are the other political leaders named by the editors of People Weekly.

Patty Hearst and Charles Manson are among the 25 most intriguing. Of Patty, they write the question has changed from "Where is Patty to what is Patty Hearst?" They predict that she may come out of her trials, there could be at least three, as a cheerful All American girl. Meanwhile the strain of being in jail is "beginning to wear on her."

OF CHARLES MANSON the editors refer to his interviews and offer this chilling comment, "I'm working slowly. I certainly have plenty of time." The editors call him a "grievously disturbed man," who may never be "released." Similar things were written of Adolf Hitler after he was imprisoned.

Millbrae Hotel Planned

Plans for a 400-room hotel to be managed by the Ramada Inns chain are being drawn up for the 6.3-acre parcel on Old Bayshore at Millbrae Avenue, according to owner James E. Richmond.

The plans will be in a "atrium" design, and within the 72-foot height limit established this fall by a ruling of the Federal Aviation Administration, Richmond said.

Plans are being developed by hotel consultant Guy R. Ramsey of Memphis and a team of architects and hotel specialists.

Richmond said that Ramsey had designed some 51 hotels which have been built around the world and is working with the Ramada chain, second largest hotel management firm in the world.

Richmond said he had asked Millbrae Mayor Barney Spera to call a special meeting of the city council and planning commission to discuss Richmond's latest proposal. Plans would then proceed through normal channels, he said.

The owner said financing is tentatively committed for the hotel project, pending approval by the city.

Forced Tour Of Daly City —Man Flees

Rozelle Lucky's luck ran out on him in Daly City early Mondy morning.

As the San Francisco Municipal Bus driver left a Geneva Avenue restaurant near the Cow Palace at about 2 a.m., a man approached him and asked for a ride, police said.

When Lucky informed the hitchhiker he was going in the opposite direction, the man allegedly pulled a small handgun and ordered Lucky to drive around Daly City.

After a brief tour of the Templeton-Geneva Avenue area, Lucky told police, he managed to grab his assailant's gun and during a struggle it discharged.

Hebrew Classes

Congregation B'nai Israel of 1575 Annie St., Daly City, announces that a new class in the Adult-Evening Study Institute will be "Basic Hebrew Reading Skills."

This will be taught in eight sessions on each Wednesday evening in January and February.

Registration and orientation for this course will take place today at 8 p.m., in the Congregation's Annex Lounge at 590 Washington St.

The registration fee will be $10 an applicant and will include the necessary textbook.

For further information and details call the office at 756-5430. Monday through Friday, 10:30 a.m.-3 p.m.

HMB AIRMAN

SAN ANTONIO — Selected to attend the Air Training Command's material facilities course after completing basic training at Lackland AFB, Tex., is Airman Christopher R. Kurtz of Half Moon Bay.

Airman Kurtz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth H. Kurtz of 355 Grove St., Half Moon Bay, will go to the Technical Training Center at Lowry AFB, Colo.

He Keeps Tabs With Jefferson

Baciocco Meets Goals

He keeps a diary and reads Thomas Jefferson every night to remind himself what he's doing in public office.

That's Dr. Edward J. Bacciocco Jr., recently of Stanford University, probably the most urbane, articulate and witty county supervisor San Mateo County has ever had.

"Jefferson talks about citizens looking into every nook and cranny of government. The reason I'm suspicious of regional government is you can't see them. If you can't watch government, Jefferson says, then you're asking for plunder, corruption and waste."

"I've accentuated my goals rather than had cause to revise them during this first year in office. I'm still opening the door of government and welcoming people back in—welcoming them home," Bacciocco said with conviction.

That set of goals includes more evening meetings of the board, fulltime service by board members, a fight to preserve Chope Hospital as a public hospital, and upgrading the Southern Pacific instead of buying a rapid transit system.

What stands out as meaningful accomplishment during Bacciocco's Year One?

He lists some specifics including: providing the public with the voting record of each supervisor; destroying the assumption that driving a county car is an executive status symbol; serving as a budget "hardliner" (he cites $2 million in proposed budget cuts where he couldn't get a second); and most of all, a concerted effort behind the scenes to get some reality out of requirements for affirmative action by the county departments.

"My meetings with the personnel office and with representatives of the Latin-American community made me aware of the competing strains in the poverty community. Mexican-Americans have more citizens and less representation in government jobs than any other minority," Bacciocco said.

"The situation has improved steadily, but some additional drastic actions have to be taken, such as expanding the rule of three (three finalists for any county job) to a larger pool of seven or eight to create an opportunity that isn't there now. We also need to do away with the eligibility list," he said.

He acknowledges this will take a county charter change and vote of the people, but believes they can be educated to understand the need for the changes.

He hopes to have the Citizens Task Force on County Government Operations review department plans for affirmative action and nurture their progress.

What were some of the areas he found most difficult? Not having enough time to think or to fully carry out his roles on committee assignments, as politician, and as a legislator. Like John Ward he feels an acute need for an aide to extend his own potential.

"Feeling like the whole staff is against me. There is good reason to believe that I don't get all of the information I require to make sound decisions. That's not anybody's fault. It's inherent in the county executive-board system," he added.

The supreme frustration of the job, however, has been trying to convince people that they must participate in democracy if it is to succeed.

"During the tax revolt meetings, I must have gone to 12 or 13 gatherings and almost got into a couple of fist fights. But at each I took the opportunity to say, 'Please don't lose interest when this issue dies down'," Bacciocco said.

"Force the politicians to give you an accounting of how your money is spent. Most people who will carefully watch the action on even on e share of Bank of America stock never ask about the return they are geetting on the thousands they spend on government," he said.

Bacciocco says he has been imporessed by the dedication, honesty, and intelligence of individual government executives he has had to work with, but he has a sore point.

"What seems to be ingrained in the bureaucratic process is yielding to the temptation to use political judgment when departmental recommendations are made to the Board of Supervisors," he said.

He said he would like fewer options, less hedging, and more departmental recommendations made n sheer technical know-how, the best possible decision based only on what principles of the expert field dictate.

Among his list of board assignments, Bacciocco has found his chairmanship of the Manpower Planning Council to be the most trying and serving as chairman of the Transit District Board of Directors most gratifying.

To hear Bacciocco re-tell the Manpower experience is to understand the saying about being between the proverbial rock and the hard place.

Some "grave errors" made early in setting up the council and its staff are now in the process of being rectified, but for a long time leadership was lacking and neither job operators nor Community Action Councils knew exactly what to expect from the new hurry-up county program.

The transit district, on the other hand, got off to a better start with a good board of directors, willing to do in-depth homework, and an excellent temporary as well as permanent staff.

"We're the only district in the Bay Area that has not added a sales or property tax for transit, the only one that has remained financially solvent. We're also the most educated Transit Board in the Bay Area — we have publicly gone into every single study on the subject that has been done," Bacciocco said.

He personally is still moving in the direction of Upgrading the Southern Pacific line, though he terms "ridiculous" the recent asking price of $200 million for 36 miles of SP line.

He points out the district has the money to subsidize upgrading the commute line while Santa Clara County does not, though it may have following an election on that subject coming up this spring.

The most important issue for 1976? Chope Hospital.

"If anything, I will intensify my effort to save Chope Hospital. I'm going to put up a helluva fight. All of the doctors I have talked to privately won't take Medi-Cal patients (except as a family favor or if it's a cancer patient) because they're losing money," he said.

All of the rhetoric and discussion boils down to a philosophy of aiding the helpless versus a philosophy of socially integrating the area's hospitals, he said.

"If government has any purpose whatever, it is to stop the bleeding, succor the injured, and postpone death," he sayd.

Americans Receptive to New Russian Art Films

"The Soviet film industry makes 150 pictures a year. That means we have 1,000 to choose from. The plan of the Russart Corporation is to show one film a week and, as finances improve, add lectures and concerts to our repertoire," Dmitry Gribanowski, president of the Russian Art and Culture Society (Russart) told me Thursday.

It used to be that Americans shied away from Russian films because of their heavy emphasis on socialist propaganda. There were jokes among San Francisco Film Festival regulars that the Russian entry would probably be another of those "socially significant works depicting a people's worker who was in love with his tractor and would give up his sweetheart or family for the good of the cause."

Those days have passed and the Soviet film industry has gained enormous stature in the Western world for lyrical, sensitive, tender and beautifully photographed films on classical and contemporary subjects. Their government-subsidized films aren't encumbered by union-budget-personality problems, although they are considered commercially produced for profit.

But the filmgoing public has had little chance to relish these handsomely crafted and artistic films outside film festivals which draw a limited audience. As a film critic, I was always frustrated by the fact that such worthwhile and aesthetically satisfying films as "Anna Karenina" with the famous Maya Plisetskaya, and the charming "100 Days After Childhood" by Sergei Solovjov would never be seen in general release by the American public.

That has been remedied with the leasing of the Roxie Theater, a former Mission district porno house at 3117 Sixteenth St., San Francisco. Operated out of a sense of love, the non-profit Russart corporation enlists the volunteer help of many people to meet expenses and further the cause of cultural exchange between the American and Soviet countries.

Nicholas Volk, a San Francisco attorney, does the public relations. Gribanowski is employed by a banking firm. Poster artist Stefan Sobczak is a designer for Roos/Atkins stores. Their representative in Moscow, the man who volunteers to negotiate deals with Sovexportfilm and keep his Russian friends in San Francisco apprised of the latest and best of films available to the West is George Ribokov, a charming man with whom I had lunch two weeks ago at the National Hotel in Moscow.

The avenues of communication are now open between a prolific film industry and a fascinated film-going public. The Roxie Theater has the wholehearted cooperation of the Mission Merchants Association which has welcomed the new theatrical enterprise with open arms. All films shown daily at 6:15 and 8:15 p.m. will have English subtitles. On Saturdays, there will be an additional showing at 4:15 p.m. and on Sundays, previews of the latest Russian films in the original language (no subtitles) will be shown at 2 and 4:30 p.m. for the small but tight-knit Russian community.

"Russart has been established here for five years," Gribanowski explained following the showing of the current film, "Doctor Ivence's Silence," a science fiction film that stars the renowned Soviet actor-director Sergei Bondarchuk as a scientist doing research on aging. It won a prize last year at the Chicago Film Festival.

"We've already sponsored concerts of visiting artists and appearances of such cultural dignitaries as Solovjov (100 Days After Childhood) to the San Francisco Film Festival. Now that we have a meeting place for receptions, we hope to do more. It depends on the response from the community and whether we can make the film export project pay for itself.

Some of the film prints they buy outright which means they can bring them back to the screen or hold it over, depending on its popularity. Some are rented and must be returned and others are acquired after their showing at various international film festivals, of which there are many.

"We want it known that this is a private enterprise, in no way financed or regulated by the Soviet government. They don't tell us what to show. And although we couldn't exist entirely on the support of the Russian-speaking community, they are anti-Communist and wouldn't come to see political films anyway. That's why we choose our films carefully.

Ward Winds Up Year One

Fighting Frustration

"I refuse to get frustrated."

That's the shingle John Ward has hung out for himself for coping with what courthouse folks would agree is the most frustrating job in creation: serving as county supervisor.

"Surviving in public office is being able to balance all of the cross-pressures and being able to leave them for a little while and be by yourself to think," said Ward who is just winding up year one in public office.

"I really like the job, it's a natural high," he added, very different than the kind of turn-on that occurs in teaching which is what Ward was doing at Crestmoor High in San Bruno before he decided to become a challenger for the Second District seat on the board.

The election of John Ward and Edward J. Bacciocco Jr. to the board of Supervisors has brought a breath of fresh air to county government, veteran courthouse observer Ray Spangler says.

The components of fresh air, other observers say, are youth, sophistication, education, a willingness to dig into issues, a desire to be informed, the courage to take risks and make mistakes, and a deep respect for the democratic process.

All of that fresh air has brought some subtle changes hereabouts, and there is more in store for 1976, Ward says.

"I want to continue to work on getting a better line on the community, not so much those with vested interests," he said.

"We must always weigh the political consequences of our decisions, and I would like to get away from worrying about being judged on a single decision by special interest groups," Ward said.

More citizen involvement and their all-round education on county issues is seen by Ward as a way to accomplish this. Ward points to the recently created Citizens Task Force on County Government Operations as one step in this direction.

"Hopefully, they are going to do what board members haven't got the time to do, and that's taking an outside look at government operations to bring about some re-organization and streamlining that needs to take place, perhaps some structural changes," he said.

Other tasks for 1976 Ward sees include "how to gear up for dealing with" such major issues crowding County agendas during the months of January and February as development of San Bruno Mountain, development of Sugarloaf Mountain lying between San Mateo and Belmont, a required seismic safety element for the county general plan, recreation plans for the San Francisco Watershed lands, future county medical emergency services, and a clutch of other difficult issues.

Ward is not forgetting the county budget "crunch" which he is anticipating so hard, he wished out loud during a board meeting this week for some more money.

Looking back over his first year, Ward said he would list, as a partial accomplishment, a shift of leadership to the county board as it has taken on a stronger role as policy-maker rather than responder.

His own goal of greater leadership potential is now hampered, Ward said, by the number of pending issues, their complexity, and time limitations — being "over-meetinged" as he put it.

The solution? Supervisor aides.

And he's serious about intending to propose just that when county budget time rolls around again.

"Setting priorities for the people of San Mateo County means being more active legislators, and I can't do that without expertise and without freeing up some of my time," he said.

And all of that is further complicated by county government growing ever more complex, increasing the workload even further.

Ward intends to pursue some of the themes he brought into office with him: bring in the public to participate in their government, hold night meetings on major issues, work on better procedures for conducting meetings and hearings held by the supervisors.

"We need a refinement of what we have achieved to date.

"We have plenty of advisory boards and commissions and ad-hoc citizens committees, but do they function within the goals of county government?" he asked.

"Why aren't people taking advantage of the open 15 minutes we've established at the beginning of every board meeting? — The time is just not being used," he said.

Ward is a warm, candid guy who does not mind appearing human or sharing the moments that may have been the most difficult during the year past:

"I was the most shook-up when I experienced my first attack by homeowners over the Euclid-O'Connor improvement project." He said he learned from that experience not to get caught short on alternatives and to demand better staff advice.

"My position hasn't changed on assessment districts, however. I still feel the board should not over-ride a majority protest unless strong health and safety reasons are involved," he said.

Another uncomfortable time was last summer's two-week formal county budget hearing period.

"I will be differently prepared this year," Ward vows.

Millbrae Man's Hobby

1,155 Cars in His Home

By RICK SULLIVAN

For the better part of his adult life Warren Sherwood has harbored an uncommon love for America's primary means of transportation.

Sherwood has viewed the automobile with some affection and it in turn has been good to him. It has provided him with both work and recreation.

For some 40 years the automobile and the 72-year-old Millbrae resident shared an enviable working relationship in both private industry and military service.

So happy was Sherwood with this working bond that early in his career he found it difficult to leave it behind after an eight-hour day. He decided to bring it home.

At first, like many car lovers, he enjoyed tinkering with automobile engines, then as the years passed he settled into a more sedate, white collar pastime that almost accidently mushroomed into a nearly obsessive hobby. Today it has brought him some popularity.

Sherwood has been told by a representative of one of the major model car kit manufacturers that he can boast of having the largest collection of model automobiles in the country.

To see his colorful assemblage of plastic, toy vehicles is to believe the distinction bestowed him.

In 24 feet of illuminated, floor-to-ceiling, glass cabinets which cover two walls in a back bedroom of the house, 1,155 toy cars and trucks glisten on row after row of glass shelves.

Sherwood is proud of his collection, and it shows in the manner in which he displays it.

Model cars of most of the major manufacturers, including Ford, General Motors and Chrysler-Plymouth, plus foreign cars and classics are displayed in separate sections of the cabinets.

From left to right and from top to bottom all of his one-twenty-fifth scale model cars are placed in the chronological order in which they were manufactured, from as early as 1922 to as late as this past year.

In a small, free standing cabinet, Sherwood has a collection of the first model kits ever marketed.

His oldest model is a 1893 Duryea of a scale that he said is smaller than the one-twenty-fifth scale.

The Duryea kit, complete with a written history of the car, was put on the market in 1950.

Sherwood said that the one-twenty-fifth scale models replaced the smaller models in 1955, three years after he took up the hobby.

His interest in cars developed in the 1930s when he went to work in the parts department of a major automobile dealership in San Francisco.

He worked there until 1942, when he entered military service.

Although he left active duty after the war, he remained in the reserves and retired after 21½ years as a Lt. Colonel from the Army Transportation Corps.

After the war, Sherwood got a job at Firemen's Fund Insurance Co. in San Francisco. He retired in 1971 as senior automobile claims representative.

"My whole life has been centered around automobiles," Sherwood noted. "In fact, I even met my wife at an automobile dealership, where she was working as credit manager."

Also, it was a dealer who gave Sherwood his first car model kit in 1953 "and ever since then I've been buying them and buying them."

"I've even got my wife hooked on models," he added. "Often when she's out on an errand, she stops into a hobby shop and looks for models I don't have."

Sherwood said it takes him from one day to 30 days to construct a plastic model, depending on how intricate the kit is.

Some kit manufacturers, Sherwood said, provide imperfect plastic parts that have to be filed to fit together properly and others may accidently leave parts out of a kit.

Because of the latter and because some parts break during construction, Sherwood maintains a "parts department" in the closet of his display room.

In glass cigar cases mounted on a peg board, there are such spare parts as steering wheels, antennas, hub caps and other delicate parts which tend to break easily.

Sherwood explained that he paints each part before assembly then fits each part together before he applies glue.

"These steps make assembly so much easier and reduce to a great degree the possibility of gluing together parts that don't fit, then having to tear them apart."

He has dozens of model kits in his display room closet that he has not yet assembled and they are likely to remain there for several months. During that time he will be dusting the models and shelves.

"I haven't done any dusting since we moved into this house four years ago," he said. "I guess it's about time I did it."

Sherwood has won awards for his model car collection, including a first place honor in 1963 presented at a Firemen's Fund hobby show.

GIRL SCOUTING

Young adults will meet Tuesday, Jan. 13 from 7-9:30 p.m at St. Andrews Church, Southgate and Sullivan Streets, Daly City according to Mrs. Virginia Rusting, Daly City Girl Scout Association training coordinator.

In recognition of the special needs of young adults who perform adult responsibilities within the Daly City Girl Scout Association, many of them leaders and assistant leaders, the San Francisco Bay Girl Scout Council has sponsored a series of evening meetings for these girls.

In addition to leadership roles in troops, many young adults donate their lifeguarding skills for the Thursday evening free Girl Scout swimming program where troops swim by age levels, each sharing with other troops.

SCOUT AMERICA '76 the bicentennial celebration of Girl Scouting scheduled for April 3 and 4 on the Serramonte Shopping Center Mall, announces a full planning committee roster according to General Chairman Alvin L. (Al) Schwarzbach.

Association bicentennial liaisons are active now in all of San Francisco and Northern San Mateo County according to Schwarzbach.

Representing San Francisco is Mrs. Helen Edwards.

Tri-City is covered by Mrs. Ada Anderson.

Iris Fallo coordinates San Bruno and Carol Miller is active in South San Francisco.

The full contingent is rounded out with Marge McCoy of Pacifica and Carole Ann Scott of Daly City.

Phisical arrangements are coodinated by John Budlong of Reel Grobman & Associates.

Roz Morino handles public relations and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stewart are in charge of the opening ceremonies.

Mrs. Nancy Appling of Hillsborough is the Northern San Mateo County Field Coordinator and with Schwarzbach is a member of the San Francisco Bay Girl Scout Council Board of Directors.

Nell Norton

Good morning, good cooks.

We've had so many fancy, elaborate meals during the holidays that a meal that is comparatively plain and simple to prepare has a definite appeal. A happy choice to fit this requirement would be barbecued spareribs and sweet potatoes, both baked in the oven.

BARBECUED SPARERIBS

- 3 to 4 pounds spareribs
- 2 medium onions
- ½ cup catsup
- 1 cup water
- 1½ tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
- ½ teaspoon chili powder
- 2 tablespoons vinegar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard

Cut the spareribs into serving pieces.

Place in a shallow roasting pan, meaty side up. Cover with foil and roast in a hot oven (400-degrees) for one-half hour. Drain excess fat from pan. Slice the two onions over ribs.

Combine the half cup catsup, one cup water, one and one-half tablespoons Worcestershire sauce, one-half teaspoon chili powder, two tablespoons vinegar, one teaspoon salt, one tablespoon brown sugar and one teaspoon dry mustard and pour over ribs.

Reduce oven heat to 350 degrees and bake until well done, about one and one-half hours. Baste with sauce during baking. If sauce gets too thick, add water.

Serves 4.

During the last hour of the baking time for the spareribs bake the sweet potatoes.

FLUFFED SWEET POTATOES

- 4 medium sweet potatoes
- 2 tablespoons French dressing
- 2 tablespoons sour cream
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper

Scrub and dry the four sweet potatoes. Bake in 350-degree oven for one hour, or until tender. Slice the top off each potato and scoop out the center (being careful not to tear the outside shell) and mash. Whip in the two tablespoons French dressing, two tablespoons sour cream, half teaspoon salt and fourth teaspoon pepper.

Spoon the potato stuffing into each shell, rounding slightly. Dot with butter and return to oven for an additional 15 minutes.

Shield Your Savings

Why are more people than ever coming to Home Savings?

Because Home is America's Largest? A good reason. But consider this also—families save, and borrow, where they are confident that they get the most for their money. Thus, long before Home was largest, so many generations of savers and homeowners made Home Savings their choice that "Old Dependable" did indeed become number 1 in the nation in both savings and loans.

Today there are added reasons for saving at Home. Today the differences between the risks of investments and the safety of savings are more important than ever. So why take chances when, safe at Six-Billion-Dollar-Strong Home Savings, you are paid such high interest...on time, every time...and you get so many extras in services!

A reminder—there are other savings institutions with names similar to Home Savings. To Be Sure at America's Largest, look for the familiar shield pictured here.

Crestmoor High center Gus Hoeft was a standout Friday as the Falcons upset previously undefeated Westmoor 61-51. Hoeft scored 19 points, pulled down 14 rebounds and had seven steals.

Falcons Snap Rams' String

Giving Westmoor High School a bitter taste of its own medicine the Crestmoor Falcons upended the previously undefeated Rams, 61-51, Friday in San Bruno.

Westmoor, which uses a zone defense itself, finally faced a zone against the Falcons and didn't react well against it. The Rams forced numerous inside passes and even more outside shots and were outplayed for three full quarters.

Crestmoor center Gus Hoeft did most of the damage against the visiting Rams with 19 points, 14 rebounds and seven steals.

Westmoor made only one serious run at the Falcons and closed to within three, 54-51, with 1:35 remaining but the Falcons hit five of six free throws and added another field goal by Hoeft to make it a 10-point spread.

Registration for Swimming Slated

Registration for winter Saturday lessons for youth and tiny tots and week night lessons for adults will be held on Jan. 10 from 9 a.m.-noon at the Westmoor Pool, 131 Westmoor Ave. (just south of Westmoor High School).

The program sponsored by the Daly City Recreation Department will offer youth and adult lessons at the levels of new beginner, beginner, advanced beginner, intermediate and swimmer.

Tiny tot (3-6 years) sessions stress water adjustment with the parent.

Children must be six years old and at least 48 inches tall.

Parents must register children.

Fees for all classes are $5 for residents and $7.50 for non-residents.

Additional information may be obtained by calling the recreation office days at 992-5356 or the pool nightly at 992-4190.

Irish Beat Padres

Serra's Cage Streak Ends

Serra High's basketball team lost 48-42 to visiting Sacred Heart of San Francisco Saturday night in a West Catholic Athletic League opener.

The setback snapped a five-game winning streak the Padres had put together at the end of their non-league season.

Sacred Heart connected on three crucial free throws in the final minute of the contest to wrap up the win after Serra had stayed within two to four points through the last quarter.

SH went 20 for 22 from the foul line in the game, including 14 for 16 in the second half. The Padres were four of eight overall from the line.

Serra, led by the inside work of center Brian Duffy, took a three-point lead at one time in the third quarter after trailing 20-19 at halftime. But SH came back to hold a 33-31 advantage at the end of the period.

Duffy, with 20 points, was the only Padre in double figures. Serra was off the entire way from the perimeter and couldn't complement its inside game — only three of the 19 Padre baskets came from outside the key.

The Padres were hurt by the absence of starting forward Gary Baker, who was out with a twisted ankle.

Serra travels to Mitty (San Jose) for an 8 p.m. battle Wednesday night.

Le Pacini

The ruling by baseball arbiter Peter M. Seitz which declared pitchers Andy Messersmith (Dodgers) and Dave McNally (Expos) free agents because their 1974 contracts were renewed for 1975 without their consent, as you by now know has at least temporarily (until Baseball Brass can appeal) put a huge dent in baseball's reserve claus.

It also has proven once again a maxim which we postulated years ago, to wit: "If there is a way for professional athletes to screw themselves up, they will screw themselves up."

Of course the argument of Marvin Miller, executive dictator of the players' association, is that pro basketball and pro football and pro hockey don't have the reserve clause, and that this merely puts baseball on an equal basis with those sports: the implication being that pro football and basketball and hockey are getting along just fine without the reserve clause.

But, you see, that is the rub. Without a control like the reserve clause, salaries in pro hockey and basketball have gone wild, and were headed that way before the NFL and AFL merged. At that, a pro football league just went out of business, and many teams in the merged NFL-AFL are losing customers yearly. The ABA is near collapse, franchizes in the WHL are in trouble. With the reserve clause, on the other hand, baseball is the most stable pro sport in the United States, and has the ticket prices to prove it.

But there always will be athletes who will want to tamper with a proven product, and who eventually will smart themselves right out of a job. Sure, the superior athletes always will survive, because there always will be SOME pro teams, and maybe the extra-shrewd ones will hang in there, but at greatly reduced salaries.

As we've said in the past, most club owners can afford to go out of business, but few athletes can afford to stop playing. And when owners get tired of losing money to assuage their egos (especially when new tax structures now pending will knock out many of the tax-saving features connected with owning a money-losing professional sports team), and fans get tired of paying ridiculous prices for tickets and parking spaces and cold hot dogs to watch millionaires play children's games, that is exactly what will happen. There will just be very few places left to play.

All that will then be left will be those college educations, which the super-bodies will soon discover no longer offer assurances of good jobs — any jobs. Not even if they had studied hard, which in most cases, would be a long-shot bet.

The original lure of spectator sports, it seems to us, involved average citizens with less than average athletic ability being able to vicariously experience the thrill of top-flight competition through athletes with whom they could identify, because the athletes, too, were average citizens, but with above average athletic ability.

Very simply, professional athletes are no longer average citizens. They have become the elite; and who wants to watch Rockefeller play football?

ANOTHER EXAMPLE of how statistics don't always tell the real truth. The 49ers had one of the best defenses in pro ball throughout the season, continually ranking third in the NFC behind only Minnesota and Los Angeles, which was a true reflection of their ability.

Then came that last, bad game against the Giants, when nobody, we guess, really gave much of a damn. So the 49ers ended up ranking only fifth in the NFC behind the Vikes, the Rams, Dallas and Detroit, eleventh in all of pro ball all of which didn't put them much above average, according to the numbers.

Tom Wittum, incidentally, finished as the third rated punter among the pros with a 41.9, behind Oakland's Ray Guy (43.8) and Detroit's Herm Weaver (42.0). Without three blocked punts, he probably would have been the leader.

Bob Oates, the Los Angeles writer, has come up with a unique and possibly correct analysis of Norm Snead. Writing for "Sporting News," he claims that in Snead the 49ers have found one of pro football's rare commodities — a competent backup quarterback. And this, he further claims, could help the 49ers to put together a winning team.

"As a starter," writes Oates, "Snead, 35, might not be able to win championships . . . but this season he has played and looked the part of a superb backup."

He says that Snead has the right attitude, that he doesn't resent sitting the bench, and that he always is ready to step in if needed; that he's not a play-or-trade me guy.

"To be sure . . they have a backup with the required talent and temperament for a job they won't have to worry about now for the next five years or more."

He says, naturally, that the big 49er problem is still a first rate, first string QB, but that if they can get that to go along with their first class running backs, pass receivers and defense, "the 49ers are strong where most clubs aren't . . . (because) to win pro football championships these days, few things are more important than a dependable backup quarterback who doesn't make waves."

Question: If "roughing the kicker" can be called when a kicker is just barely brushed, then why aren't quarterbacks who usually are murdered (albeit "cleanly") after they let go of their passes, protected just as carefully? Aren't they a rarer commodity than kickers?

Irony: That "prevent defenses" usually yield all kinds of yards. The theory, of course, is to bend, but not break. Give opponents that short yardage towards the end of a close game, but not the big play which causes a score. Except that more often than not, it seems, the short yardage usually adds up to a score, anyway.

What is more amazing to us is that even good defensive teams, who have stopped opponents all day with their standard defenses, will go into "prevent" late in a game, and the previously neutralized offense will suddenly start clicking.

THE BOTTOM PORTION of the column of a couple of weeks ago dealt with the "Washington Star" "expose" of homosexuals in athletics, but was cut, either because of space problems (which was probable) or because our editor didn't think we should discuss the possibility of Gary Davidson promoting such things as a Gay Pro Football League.

We were also in the middle of a thought concerning former 49 halfback Dave Kopay, who "came out of the closet, when the column was abruptly ended. And so that you won't think that we write columns with no endings, we'll tell you what followed Kopay's saying that, "I spent four years in San Francisco . . . uptight as hell. I never really admitted . . . these feelings to myself until . . . I came to Washington (and) saw . . . a cosmopolitan attitude where you could actually see gay people in bars or at a party, people I could relate to."

What we said was that if Kopay couldn't find soulmates in San Francisco for four years, that he's got more problems than just homosexuality.

We also wondered if there really could be the same incidence of homosexuality among sports writers as among athletes and bookkeepers. But maybe that's a whole other column.

Skyline Struggling

By JERRY LITTRELL
Post Correspondent

Lyle Newcomer captains a virtual ghost ship right now and it seems it will take nothing short of a minor reincarnation to rematerialize hopes for reading the state basketball finals again this season.

Totaling up transfers, injuries, disciplinary problems and dropouts the Skyline College basketball ranks have thinned. It's now at the point where Newcomer has only four substitutes to call upon and even that number may drop to three.

Everything depends upon the extent of a mysterious injury to starting guard Nick Pappageorge, a lower leg problem which has been diagnosed as everything from a servere sprain to a possible broken bone. If he does have a serious enough injury to sideline him the Trojans are in deep trouble.

Pappageorge made a token appearance Friday night in the Trojans' 107-86 loss to visiting Alameda. He scored eight points in about 15 minutes of play but was limping badly at times and was not capable of his usual lateral movements either on offense or defense.

And that loss of quickness won't help the struggling Trojans. Should Papageorge be able to shake off this nagging injury he still may be three weeks to a month away from getting back to his easy-20-points-per-game self.

"The doctor said it was a possible fracture of a bone in his right leg," said Newcomer. "He said it should be okay to play but he wouldn't be, but above 70 percent effective. I think we may have it re-examined because he just isn't able to move with it too well at all right now."

An adjustment period in either case could be costly to Skyline as it is only four days away from entering Coast Conference action. The Trojans did play well without Pappageorge in Friday night's second half staying even with an Alameda team which put up exactly 100 shots and hit 50 of them.

"Right now I would have to say we are looking towards the playoffs at the end of the year," Newcomer admitted. "If nothing else goes wrong we should be playing pretty good ball by then."

Skyline does have two other capable scorers in Frank Denucci, 26 points for game honors against Alameda, and Mark Felix, who added 23 in a losing cause but the consistency of the other starters is a question mark.

"Last year's state title team was small and quicker but they also had great consistency," the Trojan coach added. "We'd go out and I could count on them hitting about 49 percent of their shots, losing rebounds but stealing the ball right back and running the fast break very well. But this year we just don't know what we will do from one game to the next."

Indoor Track Dates

The Olympic track year in the Bay Area will kickoff Jan. 23 with the San Francisco Examiner Games at the Cow Palace. The 13th annual indoor track carnival is expected to feature one of the top lineups of Olympic and international stars in local history.

Northern California's only sanctioned indoor meet benefits San Francisco Examiner Charities, which annually provides more than $50,000 for Bay Area youth programs.

Meet director Jim Terrill has issued invitations to — and expects exceptances from — world record holders Dwight Stones in the high jump, pole vaulter Dave Roberts, decathlete Bruce Jenner (for a special triathlon), shot putter Al Feuerbach, sprinters Steve Williams and Don Quarrie, halfmiler Rick Wohlhuter (Sullivan Award winner) and indoor record breakers Tony Waldrop in the mile and Dan Ripley in the pole vault.

Add to that list Olympic gold medalists Randy Williams in the long jump and marathoner Frank Shorter (for the two mile) plus new American triple jump record holder Tommy Haynes, halfmiler Mark Enyeart (conquerer of Wohlhuter in 1975), Cal's James Robinson and defending Examiner Games mile champ Paul Cummings (the former NCAA champion).

Headlining the women's events is Francie Larrieu, who broke world indoor records six times in three different events last season — including a 2:40.2 for 1000 meters. She's anxious to defend her Cow Palace 100 meter title against Pan Am 800 meter champ Kathy Weston of Reno, American 800 meters record holder Madeline Manning Jackson and world three mile record breaker Julie Brown of UCLA.

Terrill also expects Oregon State's Pan Am high jump champion duo of Joni Huntley and Tom Woods plus Ron Livers of San Jose State in the jumping fields.

Sale of tickets for the San Francisco Examiner Games at the Cow Palace January 23 has just begun — to coincide with the Holiday season. At present there is excellent availability in all categories ($4, $5.50 and $7) — including trackside — for the popular meet, which annually draws capacity-size crowds.

Tickets agencies include all Bay Area Macy's, Greyhound, Ticketron and BASS locations; the Cow Palace, the Examiner (110 Fifth St.) and the Downtown Center Box Office (325 Mason) in San Francisco; Neil Thrams-Breuners in Oakland; the San Jose Box Office (Town and Country Village), and Darcy's Sporting Goods (200 Second Ave.) in San Mateo.

As usual several foreign Olympians will complement the outstanding domestic entry list.

'A Strange Pre-Season'

Westmoor Shows Most Potential in NPL Cage

It's been a strange practice season for North Peninsula League title contenders.

Based on last year's graduations and summer showings, either Jefferson or Serramonte were choices to take the title, with the other finishing second.

Westmoor, which has a 34-game win streak in league play, was expected to finish in the third position after losing both Ted Scott and Maurice Pittman to graduation.

But neither Jeff nor Serramonte has displayed any consistency this season, while the Rams ran off seven straight wins, finished with an 8-1 practice record and won the championships of both the Serra and El Camino invitational tournaments.

Wednesday afternoon's basketball action finds Terra Nova at Westmoor, Serramonte at Jefferson (in the day's featured game), Oceana at South San Francisco and Half Moon Bay at El Camino. All are 3 p.m. starts.

Unless a drastic turnaround takes place, the Rams have installed themselves favorites to take the 1976 crown. Veterans Jerry McNeil, probably the best player around; Chris Tyeskey, a junior in his second year of starting, and last year's sixth man; and senior guard Danny Williams, make the Rams a potentially powerful offensive team.

Jefferson has the firepower to go all the way, with two-year veteran center Ron Sylvia in the pivot and returning starters Randolph Singleton and Danny O'Shea along with Ed Mixco and Greg Zanders rounding out the starting five.

Serramonte has had some trouble at the guard position, but has veteran Matt Scheffler and Skip Campbell up front with junior Reggie Love in the pivot.

The fourth playoff spot is wide open. South San Francisco had the early nod until the Warriors went on a horrendous practice output that saw them win only two games.

Oceana has also been sporadic, but sophomore transfer Conrad Simon could lead them to the playoffs.

Half Moon Bay, El Camino and Terra Nova all apparently have scoring problems right now and probably will not make the playoffs.

CSM Hosts Track Trials

Hundreds of Northern California track and field competitors will be seeking berths in the San Francisco Indoor Games Jan. 23 at the Cow Palace during qualifying competitions in seven divisions at two all-weather tracks this Saturday.

Spots are up for grabs in 20 of the 35 events of the Games. The qualifiers will add to an entry list of outstanding international class athletes who'll be competing in the featured invitational events during the Games' unique Golden Hour.

College of San Mateo will be the site of the high school, women's and age group (boys and girls) trials, while San Jose City College will host community college, college division and masters events — starting at 12:30 p.m.

Sharks Whip O'Connell

Oceana High's basketball team closed its nonleague season Monday with a 72-44 win over visiting O'Connell.

Oceana, now 4-5, opens North Peninsula League play at South San Francisco Wednesday at 3 p.m.

CONFLICT ALERT

Concept of the Federal Aviation Administration's new automated "conflict alert" program for air traffic controllers is illustrated above. "Cylinders" of airspace enclose airliners being tracked on FAA radar sets. Whenever a computer forecasts overlapping of these 5-mile-across cylinders within two minutes of flying time, a warning flashes on the controller's screen. The controller then instructs pilots that a collision is possible and advises them of course changes to avoid conflict.

'Conflict Alert' May Prevent Crashes

America's air traffic controllers have a new aid in preventing mid-air collisions.

It's called "conflict alert," and what it does is alert the controller if two or more planes in the controller's area are going to get too close.

Conflict alert is "software" only, according to Federal Aviation Administration Chief Controller Frank Jones. It is a new way of using existing radar equipment and computers to help prevent collisions between the nation's airlines.

During the week it has been in use at the Oakland Air Route Traffic Control Center at Fremont, Jones said, "several" alerts have been flashed on the radar screens. All of them have been military aircraft joined for refueling.

The system does not apply to aircraft below 18,000, the "floor" of FAA's "positive control area."

Later on, the system might be adapted to lower altitudes, Jones said. This is only the "first step."

At present, aircraft being "handled" by a controller at any of the nation's 20 Air Route Traffic Centers must electronically report altitude. Coupled with radar tracking information observed by the equipment, the altitude information is used by the computer to predict the location of aircraft at least two minutes in advance.

The automated radar tracking system encloses each plane with a "cylinder" of air space five miles across and 2,000 feet deep.

Any time such a "cylinder" moves into position where it will collide with another such cylinder within two minutes the radar screen flashes an "alert."

Jones said that when an alert is flashed the controller "immediately" advises the pilots and instructions them how to avoid a collision.

At present, the "conflict alert" system will only apply to aircraft flying on instrument flight plans filed with the FAA, and working with a controller at all times during flight. This covers rs most airlines, he pointed out.

Due to limitations of equipment, the system will not be applied to "unknown" traffic, such as small planes traveling on visual flight rules, said Jones. Few such aircraft fly above 18,000 feet.

The FAA is considering lowering the "floor" of the new system to 12,500 feet, however, which would place many additional aircraft into the system and would thus increase the number of planes being "handled" by air traffic controllers.

Jones said the possible effects of such an increase in workload, are being studied.

Warning On New Pot Laws

District Attorney Keith C. Sorenson today issued a warning that the new marijuana laws which take effect Thursday still make possession of small amounts a misdemeanor.

Some of the publicity about the law's changes has suggested that possession of marijuana will become legal or no more serious than a traffic offense, he noted.

"Any such misinformation should be corrected," Sorenson said. "While the penalties for possession of marijuana have been reduced, possession of any amount of marijuana is still a misdemeanor.

"The misdemeanor penalty for possession of not more than one ounce of marijuana is a maximum fine of $100," Sorenson said. "The misdemeanor penalty for possession of more than an ounce of marijuana is a maximum of $500 and six months in county jail.

"Many other crimes such as possession of marijuana for sale, sale of marijuana, and cultivation of marijuana still remain serious felonies carrying possible long prison terms. Possession of hashish and other forms of concentrated cannabis remains a felony.

"The District Attorney's office intends continued prosecutions on marijuana violations according to the spirit and letter of the new law," Sorenson warned.

The new law erases possible felony charges for possession of less than one ounce of marijuana.

Suspects Elude a Road Block

Two armed robbery suspects driving a stolen automobile managed to elude a countywide roadblock Tuesday night, but not before a high-speed chase which ended in a head-on collision with a Belmont police car.

The incident began at about 10 p.m. in Menlo Park, where Alvaric Sampson, of 1208 Mills St., Menlo Park, reported to police there that a man appeard at his door to express interest in his sports car.

While the suspect was being taken for a test drive, he suddenly pulled an automatic psitol on Sampson, and ordered him to drive to Bay Road and Ringwood Avenue, where the men were joined by a second suspect, who was armed and wearing a mask.

Sampson told police he was then ordered from the car, and the two men sped off.

Menlo Park police then broadcast a countywide alert for the vehicle, which was spotted a short time later by Belmont Officer Richard J. Fogarty, who pursued the car up Ralston Avenue and into the grounds of the College of Notre Dame.

The car, this time carrying a single suspect, failed to heed the flashing lights of several pursuing patrol cars, and headed eastbound on Ralston at a high rate of speed.

The stolen car then made a right turn from Ralston onto El Camino Real, on the wrong side of the road, where it collided with Fogarty's patrol car.

Following the collision, the suspect leaped from the badly damaged car, and ran from the scene, escaping by running past the Belmont police station and through the civic center complex. No trace was seen of the second suspect.

Fogarty was not injured. The patrol car sustained severe damage to the front end.

No Injury In Blaze

Fire swept through a second floor apartment in San Mateo last week, resulting in $15,000 damage, firemen reported.

The alarm was sounded at 1:58 a.m. when Mrs. Yolanda Tyler suddenly discovered smoke coming from a closet in her bedroom at 815 East 4th Ave.

Mrs. Tyler, her dog and two cats, fled from the burning apartment. Neighbors pulled a fire hose out of a box in the building to fight the blaze as firemen arrived on the scene.

Pacifica, 1975

Just Staying Low, Quiet

By JANET PARKER

It was a "caretaker year" for the City of Pacifica, according to Les Clark, director of community development.

For Pacifica, 1975 has been a prelude of what's to come.

City Manager Don Weidner has projected that the city is heading for insolvency by July, 1978, if present spending trends continue.

The city already has tightened its belt this year and the low level of new developments and projects in the city is a sign.

Clark said one positive accomplishment this year was the receipt of a $4.5 million federal grant by the Environmental Protection Agency to upgrade sewage treatment.

The grant will permit the construction of secondary treatment facilities at the Sharp Park sewage treatment plant.

The city has projected construction of the second phase to begin in May.

"We really put sewage treatment on a sound financial and operating basis this year," Clark said.

He said the city established the safety factor and standby back-up equipment for emergencies should the existing operating equipment break-down.

The existing plant was finished in 1972.

Along with the upgrading of the plant this year, sewer service rates were increased.

Clark explained the city next year will have to relocate its corporation yard. City vehicles presently are housed on the treatment plant site.

Clark also cited:

- Consolidation of the community development and public works departments this year to provide a more efficient operation.
- Implementation of a city-wide bus system with eight buses provided by the Metropolitan Transportation Commission funds.
- The first steps of a study on the needs and plans for a civic center facility.

"This has really been a caretaker year," Clark said. "We haven't done anything significant to improve the economic base of the city.

"We're going to see more of a caretaker operation next year."

The year has been somewhat more progressive for the Parks, Beaches and Recreation Department.

Ginny Silva, director, said the new Seniors in Action program has been "an incredible success."

In 1974-75, the program was funded by a $10,000 grant from the California Commission on Aging.

This fiscal year, however, the City Council appropriated the entire $18,000 funding and new services were added.

New services include a transportation program, an outreach program to seek more seniors who need help, and a Thursday soup program where seniors get together at Oddstad Center and cook soup, sing songs and socialize.

Also introduced this year was a $50,000 social service program in three parts — a "Neighbors in Need" program, an emergency food distribution service and a juvenile counseling program.

The department also has been working on the third phase of its Frontierland community park, a $142,000 project. This will include turfing, completing picnic areas, installing a children's play area, lighting and irrigation.

MTC Solicits Public Input on Alternatives

Residents of the three west bay counties, Santa Clara, San Mateo and San Francisco, wishing to participate in the study of the future of mass transit as it might affect their communities are urged to be present at the initial meeting of the Citizens Advisory Committee for the Peninsula Transit Alternatives Study (PTA).

The meeting will be held Jan. 8, at 7:30 p.m., at Menlo Park City Hall, just off Ravenswood and Alma, one block east of El Camino Real. It was called by the Metropolitan Transportation Commission (MTC), which is conducting the study.

At the meeting, Jack Beckett, MTC chairman, and Frank Small, chairman of the Citizens Advisory Committee, as well as MTC staff representatives will provide information on:

the offer of Southern Pacific to sell part of its peninsula holdings;

Recent studies on upgrading of SP service and on BART extensions in San Mateo County;

The process of reaching decisions on the future of peninsula transit;

The role that interested citizens can play.

"The recommendations from MTC's study will have major effects on the future of Santa Clara, San Mateo and San Francisco Counties.

Citizens have an opportunity to be heard and to participate through the Advisory Committee, which will begin its activities with the Jan. 8 meeting," said Frank Small.

Membership of the PTA Board of Control is made up primarily of MTC Commissioners from the West Bay Counties.

They are John C. Beckett, MTC chairman representing Santa Clara County, who is serving as the chairman of the PTA Board of Control; Jack Crowley, representing the Mayor of San Francisco; John E. Dearman, representing the City and County of San Francisco; Gene Hardin, representing California State Business and Transportation Agency; Joseph C. Houghteling, of the San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission; William R. Lawson, representing the cities and county of San Mateo; William H. Royer, San Mateo County supervisor, representing the Board of Supervisors; James Self, councilman of San Jose representing the Cities of Santa Clara County.

Merchants Hold Election

The Daly City Mission Merchants Association has elected new officers and directors for the new year.

They are president, George Smith; vice-president, Vince Merlo; secretary, Elna Greenwood; and treasurer, Beverly Dikes.

The official installation will be held Jan. 31, at House of Parties on Hillcrest Boulevard, in Daly City.

There will be dinner dancing to the music of Al Borelli.

Phone 755-6700 for reservations.

Book Reviews Planned

A new and exciting program has been initiated by the Beth Israel Judea Sisterhood. Membership chairman, Mrs. Polly Owen, has arranged a series of book reviews to be given by Rabbi Herbert Morris.

All sisterhood members and their guests are invited to attend the first Book Review of the new year on Jan. 13 at 10 a.m. in Fellowship Hall.

"Two Live, Two Land" will be the topic of discussion led by Rabbi Herbert Morris.

MAKING PLANS

Organizing the Westlake Catholic Women's annual fashion show and luncheon are (from left) Mrs. Harry Lindner, fashion show co-chairwoman; Mrs. John Zuffo, programs; Mrs. James Barnett, investments; and Mrs. Harry Kanelopoulos, fashion show chairwoman. "Reflections" will be held in the Grand Ballroom of the Fairmont Hotel on Feb. 7. Tickets at $8 may be purchased at Our Lady of Mercy church hall on Jan. 24, from 10 a.m.-noon.

Last of Its Kind?

SSF to Consider Public Housing Project

Plans for a South San Francisco public housing project, one of the last of its kind in the country, was to be laid on the table at a special City Council study session Tuesday.

The council, city officials and the South San Francisco Housing Authority met at 7 p.m. to study the architectural plans for the 30-unit project.

It will be the council's first appraisal of the new plans which were developed in conjunction with Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Ernest Oresti, Housing Authority chairman, said the project's architects will be present to answer questions concerning the project, which will be located at the south end of C Street, behind South San Francisco High School.

Architects and Housing Authority representatives will explain when the project will go to bid for contractors, how soon the housing development may be completed and the expected cost of the development.

City Planner David Hale said the city's project probably is one of the last of its kind.

In previous years, HUD has sought public housing in single concentrated areas.

Housing at Hunter's Point in San Francisco is an example of the concentrated effort.

In recent years, however, HUD has been seeking more decentralized public housing scattered throughout cities, rather than in a single location.

The idea, said City Manager Ed Alario, is to remove the stigma attached to public housing projects.

"They are no longer taking low-income areas and placing low-income housing there," said Alario. "That's not solving the problem. It's probably creating more of a monster."

In fact, he said, the effect is sometimes a ghetto.

Oresti explained, however, that the maintenance problem with the existing wooden structures at the property made their preservation impractical.

It would have cost, he said, up to $400,000 a year to keep the wooden houses built in 1943 liveable.

"It would be throwing $400,000 down the drain," Oresti said.

So, the Housing Authority determined it would be better to replace the World War II structures, many of them boarded up, with new buildings.

Funding was obtained from HUD and the project got under way several years ago.

A set of plans completed earlier was sent back to the drawing board because the extension of C Street, routed through the property, is not wide enough.

Plans had to be made, Alario explained, for that street to be widened.

Alario said that recent federal laws are mandating a specific number of low-cost housing in cities.

"We can't turn our back on that," Alario said. "We are fortunate to have this project rolling."

He said that if the Housing Authority Development Project had not been approved by HUD for funding, the property probably would have been sold, zoned R-3 and apartments eventually could have been built.

The City Council already has adopted a resolution guaranteeing $5,000 a year support over a five-year period if the project should be in financial trouble after completion.

When construction begins, Oresti said, the Housing Authority will handle relocation of those who resided in the existing wooden structures.

After the project is completed, those relocated will have the first priority to live in the new structure if desired.

At Tuesday's meeting, the council also was to receive a projected timetable for the project.

Kidnap Charge For SF Man

A 36-year-old San Francisco man was arrested by Pacifica police Wednesday afternoon on kidnaping, attempted rape, assault with a deadly weapon and armed robbery charges.

Authorities identified the man as Troy Cooper of 25 Chasmier.

His arrest, according to police, came after he allegedly forced a woman at knifepoint to drive him from the area. The police said Cooper was on the passenger side of the victim's vehicle when he was taken into custody after a pursuit.

Police said the pursuit was made possible by an alert neighbor of the victim. The witness, according to police, saw a struggle and ran outside quickly and obtained the description and license number of the car as it sped away.

The witness went back inside and telephoned police.

Only a short time earlier, the authorities had received a report from a 47-year-old woman and her 8-year-old daughter that they had been assaulted by a man with a knife while they walked on a pathway, west of Skyline Drive, from the Pacific Heights Shopping Center to the Pacifica Highlands tract.

Finocchio's Nitery Appeals to Tourists

Finocchio's, a famed nitery on San Francisco's Broadway, seems to have an international appeal. Joe Finocchio's all-star cast of female impersonators has drawn world-wide publicity over the past 38 years. Finocchio's is a regular stop for both Greyline and Holiday Tours, attracting nearly 100,000 visitors each year . . . Bayhill Lounge, located in San Bruno's bustling Bayhill Shopping Center, is a pop after-work gathering place. Hot hor d'oeuvres are offered every evening from 5 p.m., and live entertainment for dancing on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights from 9 p.m. featuring Clean Sheets . . . Wilfred "Chuck" Pierce, executive chef at The Castaway, Coyote Point, started his career while still in his teens as a way of paying his way through school. His intention was to become a draftsman, but he did so well in the restaurant that he was soon promoted to sous-chef. His long and successful culinary career was put in motion . . .

PERSONABLE COUPLE
Mr. and Mrs. Fred Damato of the elegant Shirt Tail restaurant in Palo Alto, where $3.95 "Early Evening Dinner Specials" are served from 4 to 7 p.m. every day of the week including Sunday.

Romano's Family Italian Dinners

Although Enrico Romano first established a reputation for excellent pizzas, his Romano's in Rockaway Beach, Pacifica, has expanded its menu over the years to include full - course Italian and seafood dinners . . . With Chinese restaurants popping up like mushrooms after a rain, it keeps Yours Truly on the double covering the many openings and closings. However, Sunday evening was a double treat. Our good friends Goldie and Ben, who have been in the entertainment business since the days of Babe Ruth and his Yankees, came into the office with raves for the recently opened Golden Door restaurant on Baldwin Avenue, San Mateo. Their recommendation was sufficient. There's an air of cordiality the moment you step inside the restaurant. The nostalgic piano tunes of talented Ben and the show style of effervesent Goldie are added attractions. Our menu selection was the Golden Door Family dinner (No. 1), which tabs out for $4.50 per person (service for two or more persons). This had to be one of the finest Chinese dinners to be enjoyed during your Bright Lighter's many years covering the restaurant scene. Kwan Cheung Lo, managing-owner-chef, must know that Yours Truly is a dessert freak, as he asked if we would like to try his home made apple pie. No sooner asked than served. Delicious, is all we can say.

Diet Deliciously at Lehr's Greenhouse

If you've been fighting the "Battle of the Bulge" during the holidays (and losing) you'll be happy to learn that Lehr's Greenhouse Garden restaurant in San Francisco serves an enticing selection of low-calorie specialties that pamper your palate while they get your waistline back in shape. At luncheon, order one of their delicious salads. And at dinner, diet deliciously on light, flavorful seafood dishes such as Icelandic Baby Lobster Tails . . . Scotty Campbell's in Redwood City rates a big nod for serving one of the most outstanding prime ribs of beef dinners on the Peninsula. See for yourself. . . . Vince's Italian and Seafood restaurant is open, serving as usual, following a Thursday holiday . . . Business at the Villa Hotel all during December almost resembled a department store fire sale, what with the many banquets and holiday parties being catered at the conveniently located San Mateo hotel. Charlie Blackwell's New Year's Eve bash was a smashing success . . .

Snow Arrives in Time Ski in the New Year

As of this writing, word comes from the South Lake Tahoe area that snow is falling — and the visiting ski fans are delighted. Owners of Barney's Casino and the South Tahoe Nugget are also delighted with the overflowing numbers of fun seekers. When planning a trek to Nevada, be sure to take along some Barney's Bonus Coupons, which are available at Nevada Tours (1417 So. El Camino Real, San Mateo) . . . The atmosphere at Nick Gust's beautiful Moonraker is of ships, seamen and navigation, which is most appropriate considering the restaurant's coastside setting. The seafaring theme is carried throughout the Moonraker, one of three Gust family dining spots located within a few feet of each other in Rockaway Beach, Pacifica . . . A special $1.09 breakfast, billed as a "traveler's special," is always available at the Colony Kitchen, located just off Highway 50 in Rancho Cordova, Sacramento. Manager Jim Isaac also posts the latest in road and ski conditions . . . "Red Carpet Service" is more than just an expression at the elegant new Phil Lehr's Steakery at the bottom of the San Francisco Hilton Tower. Dinner guests follow the red carpet right into the immaculate kitchen, where meat cutters in tuxedos cut New York, Top Sirloin and Filet Mignon steaks to order, any size.

Compost Booklet Offered

"How to Make Rich Garden Compost Hygienically, a new 20-page booklet written in co-operation with the Soil Association for home gardeners interested in learning about garden compost, is available free from Rotocrop, manufacturers of compost bins. Entitled "A Lot of Rot on Gardens," the booklet explains in clear, non-scientific terms how garden compost can act as a soil conditioner and a fertilizer to improve the growth of both flowers and vegetables without the need for chemical fertilizers.

The Soil Association, with headquarters in England, is anon-profit organization founded by the late Sir Alfred Howard, pioneer of organic methods of cultivation.

The booklet first explains that a garden compost heap is a man-made device by which the natural process of decomposition is speeded up so that animal and vegetable waste can be used to improve the soil and make plant nutrients more readily available to growing plants. "Compost made from a good variety of common ingredients can directly supply your plants with all the nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium they need, as well as many other minerals" states the introduction. It also goes on to explain that compost can be used as a mulch to create a weed-free blanket between rows to protect plant roots from drought and cold, and that compost is a soil conditioner, adding fibrous qualities to the soil. This encourages earthworms which enrich the ground.

Aged Express Some Concern

Peninsulans' Optimism

By VERA GRAHAM

Everyone in San Mateo County — and that can be stated pretty much without exaggeration — hopes that 1976 will be a better year than 1975.

And that hope is extended not only to local residents but to the nation.

The passing year was great for some, bad for others, a year to remember, or one to forget.

And the hopes and concerns of many people throughout the county, particularly in older and middle-aged citizens, center on the condition of the United States. Not only is the economic condition, which some fear will get worse, a matter of concern, but the whole situation in which the nation finds itself today, worries people.

And many believe that we had better begin to pull together as a nation and restore ourselves as a people.

As one woman put it, "We have a darned fine country, and we had better begin to pull ourselves together. They say you don't appreciate what you have until you lose it. Let's hope that never happens to us . . . And we've got to start doing something about it." The speaker was Mrs. George Paneretos of 120 DeSabla Road, Hillsborough.

Virtually echoing her words were Bill and Nellie O'Connor of 117 Powell St., San Mateo. The retired Shoreview couple formerly operated the popular "Broken Chair" shop in San Mateo where treasures could be found.

For both Nellie and Bill O'Connor the year has not been good. Mrs. O'Connor has had two operations, Bill has "up and down days from emphysema."

"I hope next year will be better," O'Connor said. "And I hope it will be better for the country. I am getting so sick and tired of reading and hearing about the Squeaky Frommes of this world. I am getting so tired of everyone pointing fingers at the FBI and the CIA, and nobody tells us what the Communist spy rings are doing to us — but that should be coming obvious to us. They are tearing down the country around our ears and our congressmen are too dumb to know it.

"The happiest creatures are our gang here," adds Bill O'Connor referring to the furry menage, including "Charlie Brown," "Goldie," "Calico," "Ebenezer" and "Ginger." "Angel," their pet for 17 years, went to Dog Heaven in 1975, making it a less than happy year for them.

"Everyone and everything grows old," adds Mrs. O'Connor. "But we can't give up."

"And we can't give up the fight to restore our country and protect it," Bill adds.

Mrs. Oleta Van Sickle, a clerk in the Hallmark Card shop in the Linda Mar Shopping Center, noted, "1975 was a pretty good year . . . I just hope we all stay healthy and happy. It went awfully fast. I hope next year will be a better one for all of us."

Mrs. William F. Murphy, of 632 Capistrano Way, San Mateo, mother of five children: Timothy, 8; Eileen, 13; Kitty, 14; Bess, 15; Jennie, 16, said: "1975 was a great year, the children were healthy. They have all done well. I'm looking forward to Jennie's trip to New York with the girls from Mercy High School and the group from Serra and Notre Dame. Christmas was wonderful."

Bill Addiego of 111 Wellesley Crescent in Redwood City, said, "I had a better than usual year, but I am worried about where we are heading economically and in other ways in this country of ours. Each year, things are getting tougher for older people who have limited incomes and face a mounting inflation. It's got to come to a grinding halt somewhere, and I am afraid that it will with a bang.

"I have always believed and proven that if I want anything badly enough and work for it, I can get it. Life hasn't been easy, but good, hard work never hurt any of us."

Addiego is the first assistant Grand Venerable of the Grand Lodge of California of the Order of Sons of Italy in America. Its region covers California, Hawaii, Nevada, Colorado, and a portion of Oregon. Everywhere he goes, Addiego says, he hears the same concerns from businessmen. Everywhere people are worried, too, about the lack of faith in government, of big government being out of touch with fiscal reality, of being out of touch with the people.

New Year's Eve Fire Damages Apartment

A New Year's Eve fire damaged a Daly City apartment while its tenant was away.

The blaze was the worst of 24 calls the Daly City Fire Department received during the day, the last just before 3 a.m. Most of the calls were false alarms, according to Battalion Chief Mel Hansen.

The fire at the 479 87th St. apartment caused an estimated $4,500 damage to the building and $2,500 to contents, Hansen said.

"From all indications, the fire started in the bed of the front bedroom, spread down the hallway to the rear bedroom," Hansen said.

He said the mattress in the front bedroom was destroyed; the mattress in the rear room damaged, along with bedding.

"Flames were coming out of the front bedroom and were licking up the front part of the apartment when we arrived," Hansen said.

Matean Kills Self After Wild Chase

A sheriff's sergeant and a deputy stood by helplessly before dawn last week as a 32-year-old man, cornered behind a shed in Woodside after a wild chase from San Mateo, raised his hunting rifle to his chin, said, "There's no hope; there's no hope," and pulled the trigger.

Sgt. William Sweeney and Deputy Bob Swenson said they had pleaded with Allen Smith White of San Mateo for almost 20 minutes to put his weapon down. They were just beginning to think they had won their battle when White raised the rifle and fired.

The scene at 2 a.m. was the end to a tragic episode that had begun almost three hours before when two San Mateo police officers had spotted White's rented car on El Camino Real and Ninth Avenue, and, thinking a drunken driver was at the wheel, turned on their red lights and sirens.

Officers John Burr and Wally Cather said a chase, which ended hours later and reached speeds of 95 miles per hour leaving three wrecked patrol cars in its wake, began slowly.

They reported White continued heading down El Camino Real at 35 to 40 miles per hour, but just refused to stop.

As he turned eastbound on Bellevue and south on Claremont and west on Poplar into Hillsborough, his speed began to pick up as he fled down the winding roads, they said.

By the time White had reached Crystal Springs west, the two motorcycle officers were called off the chase and replaced by two San Mateo police cars and one from Hillsborough.

San Mateo Officers Richard Allen and Lawrence Greenman reported White led them south on Canada Road at speeds of up to 95 miles per hour, but although they managed to stop him twice, he backed up into the two San Mateo cars and one from Hillsborough, and took off again.

By the time White reached Woodside, officers reported, he turned into the driveway of a private estate at 300 Olive Hill Drive and abandoned his car.

Swenson and Sgt. William Sweeney located the car with an empty rifle box in the rear seat and an empty ammunition box in front.

Lt. Frank Bastasini was walking a half mile away to direct a tow truck to the auto when he noticed White strolling down Olive Hill Road — with the rifle in his hands. He said White pulled the rifle on him, and when Bastasini yelled for him to put it down, White dived into a creekbed again and disappeared.

Seven patrol cars were circling the area about this time, when Swenson and Deputy Quincy Powell found White behind a shed at 131 Olive Hill Road.

Although White had previously lived with his mother at 1919 Alameda de las Pulgas, San Mateo, and at 1834 Carmelita St., San Carlos, officers reported he had apparently moved back to a new address with his mother in San Mateo.

Education, 1975

A Bleak Year

By JOHN HORGAN

Public education took a beating in 1975. Basically, the whole year was a downer.

Enrollments continued their precipitous slide, the voting public was adamant about not approving fresh funding and conflicts generated out of all this sprouted countywide.

Perhaps the most striking decision occurred in the Sequoia Union High School District.

There, the district's board of trustees voted to shut down Ravenswood High School in East Palo Alto.

The move caused trauma before, during and after the decision was finally reached during an emotional gathering of the board.

Ravenswood became a target for closure because of its small enrollment and a lack of community clout at the district level.

Other schools in the system were considered for closure but Ravenswood got the nod.

The school is now in its final year. It will be closed in June of 1976. What will become of the place remains to be seen. Community leaders want the school to be used as a center for local residents. There has been talk of having the San Mateo Community College District establish some classes there.

Sequoia was not the only district which experienced some problems this past year.

There was a bitter teachers' strike in the South San Francisco Unified School District which divided the community.

Community factions on the Coastside spent the better part of a year lobbying to sack Dan Thompson, superintendent of the Cabrillo Unified School District, but they failed in their quest. The district's board of trustees voted to rehire Thompson.

The San Mateo Union High School District, operating under a new superintendent, Austin Sellery, and a new board of trustees, began to consider its most troubling questions: how to handle a flow of students from Foster City (which has no high school of its own) and whether or not something might have to give in some other part of the district.

380 on Ballot

A judge ruled Friday that Pacifica councilwoman Grace McCarthy was not in conflict of interest when she voted with two other councilmen to place the Freeway 380 issue before the electorate this March.

Thus a group calling itself the Committee for Good Government failed in its bid to have the issue removed from the ballot.

Arguments and testimony on related issues dealing with improvements of Sharp Park Road were continued on an indefinite basis.

Attorney Maribeth Halloran, representing the committee, argued that Mrs. McCarthy was in conflict because she owns property in the area of an alternative to the present proposed Freeway 380 site from Freeway 280 to Highway 1.

She argued that because of the alternative, Mrs. McCarthy should not have voted to put the issue on the ballot. The vote was 3 to 2. The ballot measure asks voters if they favor completion of Freeway 380. It is advisory only. The freeway has not begun.

Pacifica City Atty. Gloria Scheid argued otherwise.

Superior Court Judge G. Brooks Ice, after reviewing documents and listening to nearly one hour of oral arguments, ruled that the Moscone Act and Proposition 9, both of which govern conflicts of interest, do not apply to the issue.

He said that the final decision to build the freeway and its location rests with state and federal authorities, and not with the Pacifica City Council.

"A vote of the city council is not a controlling one to the location of the freeway," Judge Ice said in his oral ruling.

As to Mrs. McCarthy's vote, Judge Ice also noted that it had no controlling effect on actual construction of the freeway.

"If she was voting on whether the freeway went through or not, that's a different story," Judge Ice said.

The judge further stated that "usually people complain because they aren't given a voice . . . the vote is simply advisory only. I think it's proper that the government have the opportunity to hear what the people want."
